ARCHITECT QUESTIONED IN GIRL'S SLAYING; YORK DIED SPURNING BRIBE, TWO CONFESS

PAIR CAPTURED WHEN POSSES ENTER HOUSES

Dry Agent Spurned $50 and Thne $100 Graft, They Declare.

BOTH MEN FORMALLY ACCUSED OF KILLING

DISCOVERED IN HIDING BY POLICE CORDONS

One Dashes Into Arms of Bluecoat and Another Marches Out.

Remaining true to the finest traditions of the Federal Service, Prohibition Agent Lamar Watson York was murdered early Saturday morning when he scorned offers of first a $50 and then a $100 bribe, it was learned last night.

His emphatic "no" to the larger offer had scarcely been uttered when a single sharp retort rang out in Brooks alley, and the agent slumped to the pavement, a fatal wound having been inflicted by a bullet from a .45-caliber double-action revolver that went through his mouth on an upward path.

Such is the story detectives have pieced together following the arrest Sunday of John Logan and John Borum, both Negroes, both of whom have been officially charged with the murder.

Raids End in Captures.

Bent on an early solution of the brutal midnight slaying, a score of heavily armed detectives and prohibition agents yesterday conducted a series of raids that culminated early last night in the arrest of Borum, suspected of having fired the shot, at an isolated farm house near Sunderland, Md.

Borum was found in a secret room at the farm house when Detective Sergt. Waldron traced a faint noise to a point outside a blind entrance to the room. With drawn guns, three detectives called upon him to surrender, and the Negro, his hands high in the air, walked from his hiding place.

Wasting no time with formalities, the detectives placed Borum in a car and sped for Washington. En route, Borum is said to have told the officers where they could find the death gun, and the weapon was discovered secreted beneath the floor of the bedroom where Borum lived.

Cordon Surrounds House.

Earlier in the day, John Logan, alleged accomplice of Borum's, was arrested when a cordon of detectives surrounded a house on T street near Thirteenth street northwest and found him hiding on a third-floor fire escape. Logan, police said, readily admitted that he was present when the prohibition agent was shot, but shifted the blame for the actual shooting to Borum.

The latter proved equally reticent about his part in the shooting. Taking his cue from the other, Borum stoutly maintained that he did not fire the shot that killed York.

The first formal step toward sending the pair to court will be taken today when a coroner's jury will convene at the Morgue and hear the police version.

Guns Fired as Group Flees.

The arrest of both Borum and Logan was accompanied by a tenseness that augured no good to either man if he showed any signs of attempting to shoot his way to freedom. When Borum was arrested, a group of negroes, wanted for questioning, ran from the house and led the detectives a chase through the adjacent woods. Their retreat was accompanied by much gunfire by the police.

Borum and Logan told their captors that York stopped their car in Brooks court when they drove there in a liquor transaction. Both jumped from the car and escaped. Through an intermediary, they sent York an offer of $50 if he would release the car.

When this was spurned, they went back and doubled the offer, the gun having been obtained in the meantime, both men admit. Taunted by onlookers, the Negroes offered York $100 and when he refused and demanded that they submit to arrest, one of them—police say Borum—quickly drew a gun and fired one shot.

They jumped into the car and sped away, leavink York in the alley.

Navy Treaty Praised In Speech by Stimson

Cut in Fleets Is Greater Than Hoped for, Says U. S. Leader.

HENRY L. STIMSON.

(Associated Press.)

In the opinion of Secretary Stimson, the London Naval Conference has reached a lower level of fleet limitation agreements "than any of us on any delegation felt confident could be attained when we came here."

Speaking from London, the head of the American delegation told a world-wide radio audience:

"We have reached the lowest level that I have ever heard seriously discussed before."

The text of the Secretary's address was made public by the State Department. It was delivered in this country over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Mr. Stimson reviewed the history of naval limitations efforts to say that the primary objective of the London conference was to stop the dangers of competition in armaments. "So far as the fleets of Great Britain, Japan and the United States are concerned," he said, "that purpose has been achieved. There can be now no competition between us. The relation of the fleets is fixed.

"Furthermore, the habit of mutual agreemnt has received one more successful precedent. The principle of

ITALY, FRANCE CLASH DELAYS TREATY DRAFT

Compromise Clause on Fleet Limitation Is Cause of Row.

DELEGATES DIFFER OVER ITS INCLUSION

Much Progress Is Made by Committee on Other Points.

BRITISH OBJECTIVE NOT YET DISCUSSED

Belief Is Held That U. S. Will Accept Formula if London Insists.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, April 13 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Drafting of the treaty negotiated at the London Naval Conference, which continued today at three sessions of the jurists and experts working together on the task, received a check when the French and Italians clashed in the experts' committee over the question of introduction into the treaty of the compromise on the rival methods of fleet limitation—by classes of ships and by total tonnage.

France wants this compromise included in the treaty. Italy objects to its inclusion. Efforts by Sir Maurice Hankey, secretary general of the conference, to bring the Latins together by suggesting that the compromise agreement be omitted from the treaty, but forwarded to the preparatory disarmament commission with a unanimous recommendation for its approval, were foiled by Signor Rosso, of Italy. He declared that Italy will not agree to the compromise in any form. The heads of the delegations will consider the subject further before tomorrow's plenary session.

Progress Is Made.

Much progress was made by the experts, over whose deliberations Sir Maurice is presiding, and by the jurists' committee, headed by Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, on other parts of the treaty, although the most crucial point, the safeguarding clause desired by Great Britain, was not touched.

Only one draft of this prospective clause has been prepared, by the foreign office here, and this is understood to provide that in case any one of the three powers signing the limitation

BODIES OF 17 MINE VICTIMS REMOVED

Twelve of Men Killed in Explosion Leave Widows and Children.

INQUIRY IS UNDER WAY

Tacoma, Wash., April 13 (A.P.).—The last of seventeen bodies, victims of an explosion in the Carbonado Mine of the Pacific Coal Co., was taken from the mine today and placed in a temporary morgue. Wives and families of the miners, who had pressed against a rope barrier about the mine entrance, maintained their vigil until the work was complete. Then they went to their homes, indifferent to the investigation which started immediately to determine the cause of the blast.

Carbonado is a small mining village high in the foothills of the Cascades. Without facilities for caring for the seventeen mine victims, the bodies were taken to Buckley and Enumclaw, nearby towns.

Twelve of the victims were married. Besides the widows, 23 children survive.

A broken air hose on a drill may have saved 60 other miners, mine officials declared. The day shift of 60 working on the Douty seam in the second level, where the blast occurred, failed to fire the customary final shot because of a break in their drill hose. The smaller afternoon shift of 21 men, which went on duty at 4 p. m. yesterday, took a new section of hose into the workings. Mine officials believed the crew repaired the drill, placed charges and then fired them—and that this caused the explosion which killed the seventeen men outright. Four miners of the night shift were far separated from the other seventeen and were uninjured. They did

ARMY OF 6,000 D.A.R. MEMBERS TAKES CAPITAL

VISITORS PASS DAY IN VIEWING SIGHTS

Overflow Is Expected at Constitution Hall During Session.

HOOVER IS SLATED TO SPEAK TONIGHT

District Women Take Leading Part in Program of Next Three Days.

The National Capital was peacefully captured yesterday by an invading army of more than 6,000 Daughters of the American Revolution, assembling here to attend the thirty-ninth Continental Congress of the organization, which meets for the first time this morning in beautiful Constitution Hall, the $3,000,000 auditorium of the society, completed last fall.

Peacock Alley in the New Willard Hotel was a seething mass of femininity last night, when the visitors from D. A. R. chapters all over the country packed it to such a degree that progress through the corridor was extremely slow. The other hotels also attracted large crowds drawn there to greet friends in out-of-town delegations.

Go on Sightseeing Trips.

Reports from Lincoln Memorial, the cherry blossoms scenes and Washington Cathedral, as well as the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, show the visitors took advantage of the lull before the actual opening of the congress this morning to visit these landmarks and historic spots.

The vesper service in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon drew a large crowd, when the Rev. Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, of the Church of the Covenant, preached an inspiring sermon to thousands of the delegates and their friends. Special music was given by the quartet from the Church of the Covenant.

Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, the president general, was the guest of honor yesterday at a large breakfast given for her at the Army and Navy Club with Mrs. Frank Curtis, of Washington, and Mrs. Eugene Gary, of Pittsburgh, as joint hostesses.

Arrange for Overflow.

It was learned yesterday that so large is the attendance of delegates, alternates and members of the thirty-ninth Continental Congress that arrangements have been made to take care of any overflow beyond the 4,000 seating capacity in Constitution Hall by equipping Memorial Continental Hall auditorium with amplifiers where alternates and others in attendance not holding delegates tickets may hear the proceedings of the congress.

An unprecedented demand for tickets to the formal opening session in Constitution Hall tonight, when President Hoover will be the principal

NATS AND RED SOX OPEN SEASON TODAY

President Hoover to Throw Out First Ball; Crowd of 25,000 Expected.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post).

The first shot on the major league baseball front will be heard today in the Capital, a foretaste of the general skirmishing that will be in evidence tomorrow in eight other big-league cities.

The Nats meet the Boston Red Sox at Griffith Stadium at 3 p. m., and in the front-line boxes, strategically deployed for a commanding view of the proceedings, President and Mrs. Hoover, flanked by dignitaries of his Cabinet and military and naval forces, will be in attendance in company with probably 25,000 other noncombatants.

Eight weeks of maneuvers and experiments in Southern training camps will be at an end with sixteen major league teams launched in the battle that has as its immediate objectives the American and National League pennants, with the successful forces carrying on into the world series, embellished with gold and glory.

But baseball's big opening-day part may yet be forced to reckon with the whims and fancies of the weather man. The forecast for today is showers, and all the clubs' money and all the clubs' men may not be able to put the ball game on again. In that event the Washington opening will be deferred until April 20, when the Nats return from a road trip.

The reinforcements and replacements that are general throughout both big leagues have found no place in the Washington line-up. For the second season the Nats, who finished fifth in 1929, and are rated again as a second division team, will be under the direction of Manager Walter Johnson, and when the team takes the field, familiar faces will be found at every position. Washington's work in the South was of a conditioning rather than an experimental nature, and the few rookies that are with the club have been unable to step out of that category:

"Marberry and Ruel for Washington."

"MacFayden and Heving for Boston."

Those are the batteries for today and Manager Johnson thus intrusts

POLICE BELIEVE HE MAY YIELD KEY TO CRIME

His Knowledge of Navy Clerk's Friends Is Held Important.

POST ATTACK STORY BORNE OUT IN FULL

Car Tag's Number Taken by Witnesses Check With Death Auto.

GLOTH SAYS SOME ARE HIDING DATA

Torn Letters Found at Scene of uMrder Said to Be of Great Value.

Fred Wilson, of Takoma Park, Md., a Government architect, is being detained for questioning by police in the hope that he will supply information vital to the solution of the brutal murder of Mary Baker. Through facts which they may obtain from him authorities are hopeful they can solve the gruesome crime and possibly arrest the slayer.

Wilson submittted to close questioning yesterday at District Police Headquarters. Lieut. Edward Kelly and Commonwealth's Attorney William G. Gloth projected a barrage of queries at him and expressed confidence that knowledge he has of Miss Baker's acquaintances will aid them immeasurably.

After Wilson's interview Lieut. Kelly gave assurance that the white man who attacked and murdered Miss Baker would soon be arrested. From the time that her body was found near a culvert on Cemetery road, near the Arlington Cemetry, police have pursued a diligent search for the slayer.

Slain Girl's Friend Called Him.

Wilson first entered the case when Miss Inez Eyre, a friend of Miss Baker, called him when she did not appear at her office in the Navy Department Saturday morning. Together with Miss Mildred Sperry and Miss Olga Skinner, Miss Eyre and Wilson went to the murder scene, where identification of the body was made.

Mr. Gloth said yesterday that Wilson had undergone a harrowing inquisition, but that his alibi checks perfectly. Through Wilson, he believes, the murderer will be brought to justice. Lieut. Kelly gave expression to similar opinions. Gloth averred that Wilson had submitted to questioning for four hours.

Asked whether Wilson will be held in custody, Gloth said that decision on that point would be governed by developments. Late yesterday Wilson, accompanied by Arlington County authorities and District police, was taken from the District Building. Arlington County was their intended destination. Two hours later they had not been seen there.

Detectives took Wilson from his Takoma Park home before noon. Mrs. Wilson said her only information was that the police wanted to question him regarding the Baker murder case. As Wilson left he told his wife that he would be home shortly. Ten hours later he had not returned.

Wilson has thhree children. He is employed as an architect in the Treasury Department. His offices are in the Southern Building.

Post Story Is Borne Out.

Police say Wilson's acquaintance with Miss Baker was purely platonic. Gloth further declared that the story in The Post yesterday, describing the assault upon a woman in a car on

HOUSE BILLS TO ASK MORE U. S. JUDGES

Bachmann Drafts Plan as Substitute for Crime Board Proposals.

DRYS AND WETS FAVOR IT

(Associated Press.)

A plan to lay aside the law enforcement commission's proposals to relieve Federal court congestion and to offer a substitute program looking to the appointment of eighteen additional Federal judges to speed up court work became known yesterday with the preparation of bills to provide for the increased number of jurists.

The substitute program was prepared by Representative Bachmann, of West Virginia, a Republican member of the House judiciary committee. He conducted a study of crowded court dockets at the request of Chairman Graham of the committee and Representative Christopherson (Republican), South Dakota, chairman of a subcommittee in charge of the Wickersham program. It will be introduced today.

The study was undertaken after the committee had repeatedly failed to agree on measures to provide for juryless trials of liquor-law violators before United States commissioners and to define misdemeanors under the Jones law.

The bills to provide the additional judges are to be brought up for consideration by the committee Wednesday by Chairman Graham, who has conferred with wet and dry leaders on the program. It is understood that both sides of the prohibition controversy have agreed that the plan is more practical to effect immediate relief.

"The appointment of additional judges is the only practical solution that has been suggested to bring about immediate relief," said Mr.

WAR ON DANGEROUS AUTOMOBILES URGED

STATUTES QUITE STRICT

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Rigorous enforcement of existing law is the obviously logical way to drive from Washington streets the mechanically unsafe automobile.

The traffic regulations afford adequate authority for official insistence upon the maintenance of all vehicles in a safe operating condition. Compliance with the law, then, depends upon the ever-greater alertness of the police and an exacting attitude on the part of traffic authorities.

The complete authority to require any automobile owner to maintain the car in a safe mechanical condition or take it off the streets that lies in the traffic office is conferred by the following succinct provision:

"No motor vehicle shall be operated on any public highway at any time when, in the opinion of the director or his designated assistants, such motor vehicle is not in a safe mechanical condition."

Proceeding under this blanket sanction of the law, the traffic director, on various occasions, has given owners the alternative of bringing their cars within the legally defined condition of safety or having registrations revoked.

There are other provisions of the regulations which bulwark officialdom in its attack on the "junker" car. One of these, specifying under what conditions a car's safety may be appraised, provides that any police officer "may, when it is evident that a vehicle is improperly equipped," inspect the headlighting, brake, tire equipment, or any other devices mentioned in the regulations. Unlimited opportunity to check on a car's safety

New Opposition Rises To Parker in Senate

Department of Justice Issues Memorandum Defending Supreme Court Appointee's Decision in Mine Workers' Case.

(Associated Press.)

With new opposition developing in the Senate to confirmation of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, the Department of Justice yesterday issued a memorandum defending his decision in the injunction proceedings against the United Mine Workers.

This decision by Parker as a Circuit Court judge is under attack by the American Federation of Labor. The Justice Department memorandum asserted that to refuse confirmation of the nominee because of this decision "will amount to refusing to confirm him because he followed and gave binding effect to the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States."

At the same time, Chairman Norris, of the Senate judiciary committee, which will consider the nomination today, announced yesterday that he would oppose Judge Parker. While Senator Norris indicated he was ready for committee action, there were signs that efforts would be made to keep the nomination within the committee for a while.

A favorable report will be made to the judiciary committee today by the subcommittee which considered the Parker nomination, but it was reported yesterday that the subcommittee was divided, 2 to 1, for confirmation. Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, of the subcommittee, is believed to be ready to oppose him.

Senators Overman (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee, and Hebert (Republican), Rhode Island, the other members, are recorded in favor of Parker. They held a hearing and received the protests of organized labor and of the Association for the Advancement of the Colored People against the nominee.

The determined opposition of the organized Negroes is giving senators considerable concern which has been reported to President Hoover, but the White House has sent back word that answers will be made to the Parker objections. The Department of Justice statement yesterday was considered the first of these.

In the face of the growing restlessness over the Parker nomination, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, expressed confidence yesterday that he would be confirmed. He did not indicate when the attempt would be made to bring the nomination before the Senate.

The disputed labor decision of Judge Parker was in a case appealed by the United Mine Workers from a decision of the district court granting an injunction in the suit brought by the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal & Coke Co. of West Virginia.

"This and companion cases," the Department of Justice memorandum stated, "were suits brought by coal-mining companies in West Virginia to enjoin the United Mine Workers, who had declared a strike in an attempt to unionize the field, from interfering with the companies' employes by violence, threats, intimida-

Dream of Official Brings $200,000 Rum Seizure

Deputy's "Hunch" Started With Radio Song and Was Strengthened by Vision in Sleep; $25,000 Boat Confiscated in Resulting Raid.

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—A "hunch," which came to Deputy Surveyor John H. McGill, head of the Customs Enforcement Bureau, while he was listening to his radio Saturday night, resulted in the capture early today of the $25,000 subchaser, Junior Annapolis, with a cargo of 2,000 sacks of high-grade liquors, valued at about $200,000, and the arrest of her crew of seven.

The hunch, McGill said, came to him in the form of a song, "Three o'Clock In the Morning," on the radio, and was strengthened by a dream in which he saw a subchaser "passing a long, protecting point of land." As a result, he dispatched a Coast Guard boat to Rockaway Point at 3 a. m. and the capture was effected.

The Junior Annapolis, Mr. McGill said, has been chartered to Boy Scout and church organizations during the daytime by bootleggers to divert suspicion.

"I was sitting by the radio Saturday night," said Mr. McGill, "getting distant stations. On three stations I heard the same song, 'Three o'Clock in the Morning.' Since this is a great hour for bootleggers, it gave me a hunch."

Cogitating over that hunch, he said, he figured that the Brooklyn shore was the most likely place for a rum boat to try to land because the other shores were fairly well guarded. So when he received a message that the Junior Annapolis had put out to sea from Arthur Kills, N. J., he dropped off to sleep thinking hard.

"In a dream," he said, "I saw a subchaser with a party of Boy Scouts aboard, passing a long, projecting point of land."

The projecting point, Mr. McGill reasoned, must be Rockaway Point.

300 Children in Theater Blaze Saved by Usher, 17

Schoolboy Discovers Fire and Asks Audience to Go Out Quietly; Some on Upper Floors Taken Out Through Windows; 15 Slightly Hurt.

Woburn, Mass., April 13 (A.P.).—The courage and cool-headedness of a 17-year-old usher boy saved 300 children from a fire which swept the Strand moving picture theater here late today just before the show started. As it was, 15 persons were slightly cut or burned and the theater was damaged to the extent of $50,000.

Five minutes before the curtain was to go up, the usher, Jerome Lynch, 17, local high school boy, noticed a flickering back of the screen. He went to investigate with a janitor and found the curtain had already caught fire. Walking back calmly to the middle to the auditorium he announced that there was a slight fire back stage and asked the audience, with few exceptions children, to walk out quietly.

Meanwhile flames shot up the curtain and curled along the roof. Some of the children screamed and pushed, but Lynch and George Patten, the manager, succeeded in getting all out.

As Lynch reached the street he heard screams coming apparently from second-floor restrooms reached by a wooden stair which was cut off by the fire. He climbed a telephone pole and jumped across to the roof upon which windows from the rest-room faced. Aided by Joseph Cohen, the moving picture operator, who had escaped from his projection booth by way of the roof, the usher broke the window and helped six girls, one of whom had fainted, to safety. Meanwhile four boys in the men's room broke through adjoining windows.

Firemen arrived and helped those on the roof to the street. Those slightly burned or cut by glass, including Lynch, were treated by doctors on the scene and sent to their homes.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 2 and 16 Today.

the Washington Monument grounds, at Seventeenth street near B street, is borne out by evidence gathered by them.

Upon the identification of the man in the car at that time lies the unraveling of the mystery.

Watchman Hears Shots.

Information given to police yesterday indicated that the murder may have been committed between 10 and 11 o'clock on Friday night. Robert Howard, a watchman at the Penn Oil Co. in Rosslyn, on a road which leads to Cemetery road, said he heard two shots fired from an automobile that speeded by the plant at that time.

Howard was sitting in front of the oil company. A car raced from the road from the direction of Key Bridge. As it passed the Hires Turner glass factory he heard the first shot. Then as it passed the Penn Oil Co. a second shot rang out. Howard admitted that he could not classify the automobile. It went toward the cemetery obscured in a cloud of dust.

Some of the acquaintances of the slain girl are not telling all they know, according to Gloth. Although he would not reveal the names of those he suspects of withholding information, he said that they would be called for reexamination.

Motive Is Sought.

Bit by bit the Department of Justice, Arlington County police and District operatives have been examining all evidence obtainable that might indicate a motive for the crime. Torn shreds of writing paper found near her body are expected to aid in this search.

Police have assembled the slips of paper, which were at first unintelligible, but which now, Gloth and Kelly say, are a strong link in their chain of evidence. Gloth would commit himself no further than to make the observation that "they are vitally important."

The subject matter of the letters has been withheld from the public. From his remarks Gloth intimated that in addition to the assault, revenge was a concomitant motive. This deduction is based on his knowledge of the message in the letters.

Victim's Movements Checked.

So far police have reconstructed the movements of Miss Baker from the time she left Miss Eyre at 5:40 o'clock until 6:05 o'clock Friday evening. It was soon after 6 o'clock when two motorists saw the woman being beaten by a man in an automobile on the Monument Grounds, where Miss Baker had parked her machine.

Took Tag Numbers of Car.

As the two motorists approached the car it sped off, north on Seventeenth street. One of the motorists took the license number of the car and reported it to the First Precinct, which turned it over to the Third Precinct within whose jurisdiction the incident occurred. This number checks precisely with the tags on the murdered girl's car.

It was the shrieks of the woman that attracted them. After the narration of the incident to the police the neighborhood was searched without effect. These witnesses have identified Miss Baker's car, which was found blood-spattered, three-quarters of a mile from her body, as the car in which they saw the assault.

Man's Age Put at 35 to 40.

From the meager description furnished by the two autoists it was indicated that the man, who was at the driver's seat, alongside of Miss Baker, was between 35 and 40 years old.

Police suppose that the car went north on Seventeenth street, up Pennsylvania avenue to M street, and then over the Key Bridge to Virginia.

C. Conway Baker, a second cousin of the victim, said last night that he would be unable to recognize the man who accompanied Miss Baker to a local theater two weeks ago. Mr. Baker saw the couple in the subdued lights of the movie house. The only impression that Baker gained is that the man was heavy set and was about 30 years of age. Baker lives at the New Berne apartments, this city.

With the development of the Washington angle of the murder, District police entered the investigation with renewed zest. Soon after the discovery of the body, when it seemingly was patent that the crime had been committed outside of Washington, local police work was cursory.

Further Autopsy Is Conducted.

As the pendulum swung toward the District, Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt summoned a jury and went to the undertaking establishment of C. J. Ives, at Lyon Village, where they viewed the body and were sworn in by the coroner. A further autopsy under the direction of Coroner Nevitt was also conducted.

At a late hour last night no report was made public of the findings of Dr. Magruer MacDonald, who performed the autopsy. It is understood that the third bullet, which was not found at the earlier autopsy, was not located.

Announcement was made by Gloth yesterday that the two slugs found in the girl's body were from a .25 calibre revolver as had been thought earlier.

If the killing had been done in the machine it is thought that the clips from the shells would have been discharged and probably found. This leads to the belief that the murder was committed outside of the machine.

Bloodstains Are Puzzle.

On the other hand, if the girl had been killed and carried to the culvert in the machine, bloodstains would have been visible on the running board of the machine. Her jugular vein was severed by one bullet which always results in a complete evacuation of the arteries.

Bloodstains found on the exterior of the automobile apparently had seeped from the pool of blood inside the car, police say. They were evidently made by coursing blood and were not splotches.

Gloth adheres to the theory that the actual murder occurred in Arlington County. In all probability, he says, the murder occurred between the oil tank yards in Rosslyn and the culvert. The car was found beyond the culvert, headed south.

Two colored men, Frank Smith and James Vollin, of Queen City, Va., commonly known as "Hell's Bottom," are being held in Arlington County. Their arrests followed the discovery of the purse and scarf of Miss Baker in their home. A colored woman from the same locality also was taken into custody but later was released.

Some of Lingerie Found.

Among the missing articles of Miss Baker's apparel are a coat, hat and part of her lingerie. When last seen she had her coat off. Late yesterday soldiers from Fort Myer, under the direction of the Department of Justice, combed the underbrush and open fields for a mile on either side of the Sheridan gate. A portion of her underwear, torn and blood-stained, was found 45 feet from the culvert.

Thousands of morbidly curious motorists yesterday passed by the crime scene. "No parking" signs were placed along the isolated road to prevent congestion. Deputies and soldiers kept the long lane of traffic moving. None was allowed to stop. Others parked their machines at nearby paths and walked to the culvert to sate their curiosity.

Long lines of automobiles passed by the bungalow at 217 Beach street, Lyon Park, wheer the parents and family of the dead girl are stopping with her friends, Dr. Thomas F. Baker, her father, talked halting with reporters. Mrs. Baker was unable to leave her bed.

Mother Is Prostrated.

Since the ghastly crime was told to her she has been prostrated. Virginia Baker, a younger sister, was profuse in her thanks for the kind treatment given them by every one. Dr. Baker continually bewailed the circumstance that brought about his daughter's death. When she wrote him that she intended to buy an automobile he advised against it, although not offering strenuous objection.

In the 24 hours that he has been in Lyon Park, the Episcopalian minister of Oak Grove, Va., has aged perceptibly. Tears coursed down his cheeks as he tried to stifle back the sobs.

Friends of the murdered girl passed into the house all day long to offer their condolences to the stricken family.

Body Will Be Removed.

Friends and relatives of the couple threw a prospective shield about them yesterday. Callers, other than close friends, were asked to remain but a brief time.

Coroner H. B. Swaim, of Arlington County, following the second autopsy, gave permission for the removal of the body. It will be taken to the home town of their parents in Oak Grove, where services will be conducted, at 11 o'clock Tuesday, in her father's church, St. Peter's Episcopal.

A delegation of U. S. S. Jacob Jones, No. 2, American Legion, will attend the funeral of the girl. Miss Baker was a yeomanette in the Navy during the World War.

PRESIDENT ORTIZ RUBIO.

PORTES GIL ORDERS PRIESTS TO ENROLL

Mexican State Governors Told to Enforce Church Laws in Holy Week.

ALL CULTS TO REGISTER

Mexico City, April 13 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Emilio Portes Gil, minister of gubernacion, today instructed the governors of the various states in the Republic of Mexico to enforce the religious laws of the country vigilantly during Holy Week.

The former president, now at the head of the ministry which links the federal and state governments, specifically ordered that all priests be called upon to register within ten days. By this action he invokes the terms of the truce reached between the Roman Catholic Church and the Mexican government last June after a bitter controversy lasting three years. One of the chief features of this agreement, described at the time by the provisional president as the "basis for a settlement," was the agreement on the part of the Vatican to observe the Mexican law requiring registration of priests. The Mexican government, on its part, agreed to register only those priests designated by the Catholic hierarchy in Mexico.

In his circular of instructions to the state governments today Sr. Portes Gil also called for enforcement of the federal laws proscribing public religious manifestations and religious exercises in either public or private schools. He quoted the law providing that only registered priests may officiate in churches.

It was over registration of priests that the Mexican government and the Vatican first split in 1926. A temporary settlement of the controversy was reached last June 21 through the mediation of Dwight W. Morrow, United States Ambassador to Mexico. This settlement provided that priests, who hitherto had not enjoyed the privileges of citizenship, should be allowed to petition the presidency for changes in the religious laws, just as any Mexican citizen, in accordance with a provision of the constitution, may petition for change of any law.

The instructions sent out by Sr. Portes Gil today contain the following significant paragraph: "Register priests and ministers of any cults whatsoever as well as persons in charge of temples. Registration shall be made in strict conformity with the law regulating the constitution and for no reason shall the number of ministers or priests exceed that fixed by the decrees of the state legislatures." (The constitution provides that each state legislature may fix the number of priests within its boundaries.)

Shooting of Boy Held To Have Been Accident

Canton, Ohio, April 13 (A.P.).—Juvenile authorities here tonight said they were convinced that the shooting to death of John Rotz, 11, in a fight last night with several playmates over ownership of a chocolate Easter bunny, was accidental. The authorities indicated that Charles Christen, 10, and Victor Gravila, also 10, who have been held in Stark County Jail pending investigation of the shooting, would be released to their parents.

Juvenile officers said they had found nothing in the stories of any of the boys who fought over the bunny, that might indicate either Christen or the Gravila boy intended to shoot John.

Former Actress Held In Raid on Speak-Easy

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—Belle Livingston, former actress who was the toast of two continents in the gay nineties, was arrested for the third time in three months today when here alleged speakeasy in fashionable Park avenue was raided by Federal officers.

Miss Livingston gave her age as 55, and her occupation as author. Three men arrested with her were booked as John Gillis and James Fitzpatrick, bartenders, and Robert Pettit, owner of the building. All were released in $1,000 bail each.

Flier Finds Slain Man; Gangsters Are Blamed

Chicago, April 13 (A.P.).—Sighted by an aviator, flying low over the city's western edge, the body of Andrew Lucas—shot through the head and arm—was found late today, supposedly a gang victim.

Police expressed belief that Lucas, 24 years old, a barber, had dabbled in bootlegging and acquired enmities which resulted in his slaying. He was once arrested for burglary.

LONDON NAVAL PACT LAUDED BY STIMSON limitation is strengthened by its successful practice. * * *

"We have every hope that France and Italy will eventually join in a limitation of their fleets similar to that which we have attained."

Reduction of existing fleets and naval expenditures, important as these might be to individual nations, "is merely a by-product" of the primary purpose of the London conference to eliminate competitive building, Mr. Stimson said. By way of showing what had been accomplished in such reduction, he suggested comparison "between the three fleets as they stand today, including ships built, building and appropriated for, and the same fleets as they will stand in 1936 under our agreement." In making that comparison he gave the following figures in tonnage reductions:

Battleships — Nine existing ships, aggregating 230,130 tons, to be scrapped and not replaced.

Destroyers—A total of 205,000 tons in existing destroyers to be scrapped, or nearly 40 per cent more destroyer tonnage than any of the three fleets will have in 1936.

Submarine Total Large.

Submarines—A total of 68,000 tons to be scrapped, or nearly 16,000 tons more than any of the three fleets will have in 1936.

Cruisers: An actual increase in American cruiser tonnage, "due to the fact that we have been idle in cruiser building for nearly 10 years." British agreement to reduce cruiser tonnage by 20 ships and Japan's undertaking not to increase her cruiser fleet, however, represents an aggregate reduction in cruiser tonnage, built, building and appropriated for, of 460,000 tons.

Nonfighting naval vessels: A total of 220,000 tons in existing ships of this class not to be replaced when scrapped as they reached the agreed age of obsolescence.

Supplementing this reckoning of naval reductions to be effected, Mr. Stimson said a "strong movement" had developed at London for further reduction in battleship fleets, but that a difference of opinion had been disclosed as to the method to be followed, whether by "reduction either in number or size of our existing battleships."

"This holiday gives an opportunity to settle this question and to decide upon the method for this further economy," Mr. Stimson said.

The secretary added that under the Washington treaty the United States would have laid down ten new battleships and completed five of them in the next six years at an approximate cost during that period of $300,000,000.

"Under our present arrangement none of these vessels will be laid down," he said.

Alaska Mail Contract Rates Called Too High

Dan A. Sutherland, Delegate in Congress from Alaska, has addressed toPostmasterGeneral Brown an emphatic protest against the recent action of the Postoffice Department in increasing by 50 per cent the compensation paid to he Alaska Steamship Co. and the Admiral Line Steamship Co for carrying mails between Puget Sound and points on the Alaskan coast.

"So far as I can learn," said Mr. Sutherland, "the most cogent reacompanies for taking this gratuity is that the ot ehrsteamship operators are getting it." He characterized the new contracts as "extortionate," and called Mr. Brown's attention to the fact that several statutes could be invoked by him to prevent contractors"compelling the Government to payextortionate prices."

Kappa Alpha Order Installs Officers

Newly Elected Officials Are Inaugurate in the Capital.

With many prominent Washingtonians present, ceremonies were held by members of the Kappa Alpha Order, Southern college fraternity, at the City Club last night incident to the installation of newly elected officers for five of its chapters.

The groups included representatives from the chapter at George Washington University, and those at Johns Hopkins University, the University of Maryland, St. John's College at Annapolis and the University of Delaware, in addition to many members who had been inducted into the order at its chapters elsewhere.

The ceremonies were conducted by Frank H. Myers, prominent Washington attorney, and commander of the fraternity's province numbering the District of Columbia, Maryland, West Virginia and Delaware. A model initiation of a pledge at the University of Maryland was a feature.

Text of Stimson Address On Naval Parley Success

(Associated Press.)

The full text of Mr. Stimson's address follows:

"Almost three months ago the American delegation landed in England to take part in the London naval conference. In order to understand its purpose and to appraise the results which have been accomplished it is necessary to view the background and history of which it is a part. Naval limitation has formed a part of the organized efforts of the world to limit international suspicions and promote good relations. It is a new effort and has grown gradually. At the first Hague conference in 1899 the subject of limitation of arms was one of the purposes for which the conference was called, but all that resulted was a resolution favoring restriction as a desirable end.

At the second Hague conference in 1907 it was considered too dangerous to put on the program. Naval competition was going on unchecked in those days, as it had been in one shape or another for centuries. This particular naval race ended in the great war in 1914 and when that war was over another competitive naval building race had begun. This later one included the United States. For the first time in our history we found ourselves facing the irritations and ill will arising from naval competition.

Neither the experiences of the war nor the exhaustion which it caused prevented the world from resuming naval competition, and we found ourselves entangled in it.

Harding Called Conference.

Under these circumstances President Harding called the Washington Conference and Mr. Hughes made his historic proposals. They were historic because they changed the moral standards of the world. Before those proposals were made human experience seemed to indicate that naval competition was inevitable. Since that day the conscience of the world has insisted that naval limitation by mutual agreement shall take the place of competition. The Washington Conference achieved enough to prove that what the conscience of the world demanded was a practical possibility. From the date of ratification of the Washington treaty not a battleship has been laid down by any nation in the world.

But though the success of that conference was great it was not complete. Only two kinds of warships were limited; cruisers, destroyers and submarines were not; and after the conference adjourned competitive building began in those types—competition which bade fair to become dangerous. The preparatory commission of the League of Nations tried again and again to agree upon methods of limitation, but failed.

In 1927 President Coolidge called the three-power conference at Geneva, but that conference failed to reach an agreement. Yet the work of these meetings was not entirely lost, for each one gave tangible evidence that the world believed in the principle of limitation and agreement. But each failure showed the extraordinary difficulty of reaching an international agreement upon that most vital concern of every sovereign state—national defense.

And the aftermath of each failure made it more and more evident that an agreement was necessary to the good relations and stability of the naval world. International suspicion, irritation and ill-will, the ugly children of naval competition, began to show their heads again. At the very time when the world needed all its resources to recover financially and economically from the exhaustion of the great war the navies of the world were beginning to build up an expensive and dangerous rivalry. It was time to try again to halt this process. The other naval powers suggested that Great Britain and the United States should see if they could get close enough together in their figures to give assurance that the failure of Geneva would not be repeated. Long negotiations took place last summer culminating in the visit of Prime Minister MacDonald to the United States. Then followed this naval conference.

Difficult Problem Encountered.

The problem which faced the American delegation here was difficult and complicated. Since the Washington treaty the United States has laid down no battleships, no aircraft carriers and no destroyers—and only three submarines. Impelled by the cruiser construction of the other nations our Congress had instituted a cruiser program, but only two ships of that program were in the water. Our Navy was ill-balanced. The end of the battleship holiday instituted by the Washington treaty was approaching, and most of our other ships were becoming old and approaching their normal time for replacement.

The question was, should the United States replace the bulk of its Navy on a competitive basis or upon a basis of limitation reached by mutual agreement with the other naval nations of the world? Would the other countries whose navies were in better condition than ours agree to such limitation without taking advantage of their better bargaining position? It is to the credit of the faith in the principle of limitation held by Great Britain and Japan that they made no such effort.

Our principal objective when we came here was to extend the principle of limitation by agreement so that it should cover all the elements of the fleet and thus complete what had been left undone at Washington, at the league and at Geneva. So far as the fleets of Great Britain, Japan and the United States are concerned, that purpose has been achieved. There can now be no competition between us. The relation of the fleets is fixed.

Successful Precedent Cited.

Furthermore, the habit of mutual agreement has received one more successful precedent. The principle of limitation is strengthened by its successful practice. At the first meeting of the conference in January, I made this statement: Naval limitation is a continuous process. We regard disarmament as a goal to be reached by successive steps, by frequent revision and improvement. Human affairs are not static, but are moving and we believe improving. For that reason wa feel that the sound and obvious course is to reach such agreements as may be possible now, with the knowledge that they are open to revision at appropriate periods; by our present agreement the favorable attitude of the world is made stronger than ever.

The benefit of this momentum will not be limited to the three powers who have actually reached a basis of mutual agreement, but will extend also to the efforts of our friends, the French and the Italians, to achieve that goal in the future. Limitation to be effective must be made willingly and with confidence. We have every hope that France and Italy will eventually join a limitation of their fleets similar to that which we have attained, but that is a result which to be effective must come only when each country fully realizes the advantages which will follow.

As I have thus poined out, the main purpose for which this conference was called was to stop the dangers of competition in armaments and to establish the mutual confidence and good will which come with agreement. It is this purpose which connects the conference with the great movement for world peace. Reduction in expenditures, important as it is to each individual nation, is merely a by-product of the other and primary purpose. Moreover, reduction is a benefit which will be increasingly realised as the nations of the world progress in the security obtained by agreement. It is only as mutual confidence develops with increasing experience that nations reduce more and more drastically their military protection. Thus experience under the Washington treaty in regard to battleships has been such that the nations are eager now to reduce the battleship fleets more rapidly than was thought possible in 1922.

Economies Are Predicted.

Nevertheless, it is proper for me to point out the great reductions and economies which our agreements will accomplish.

The first great economy which we shall achieve is not a reduction but a holiday or postponement of construction of ships. Under the schedules of the Washington treaty the United States was to lay down ten new battleships and to complete five of them during the next six years. Under our present arrangement none of these vessels will be laid down. This means that approximately $300,000,000 which would otherwise have been spent during the next six years will not be spent. Furthermore, this holiday will, we believe, pave the way for further economies in battleship construction. There is a strong movement under way for a reduction either in the number or the size of our existing battleships. But there is a difference of opinion among the nations cooncerned as to which of these methods will furnish the best avenue for such reduction. This holiday gives an opportunity to settle this question and to decide upon the method for this further economy.

In estimating the actual reduction which will result from the present conference you have doubtless read many varying sets of figures. These differences have occurred because of the different methods employed by the writers. Some have counted average ships which happen still to be in commission; while others did not. Some others have counted ships authorized though not yet built; while others did not. And there have been many other variations. I will, however, give you two comparisons on battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines which I think will present the fairest picture of the reductions we have accomplished.

Geneva Conference Recalled.

The first is to compare the limitations which we have fixed with the lowest limitations which were entertained at the unsuccessful conference in Geneva in 1927. In 1927 the lowest tonnage figures which Great Britain would discuss for cruisers, destroyers and submarines taken together were 590,000 tons. In addition to this she insisted upon retaining until 1936 25 per cent of overage tonnage. As against this her tonnage in these types of ships under our present agreement will be 541,700 tons; a reduction of 43,300 tons. Japan has agreed to a reduction of 17,950. In addition to this reduction, Great Britain has agreed to scrap immediately 133,900 tons of her battleship fleet. We are to scrap immediately 69,900 tons of our battleship fleet and Japan 26,300 tons. If you add the total difference for the three fleets of these three nations between the Geneva proposals and the present agreement there is an aggregate reduction of 340,000 tons. And this is without counting the 25 per cent average ships which were to be retained under the Geneva proposal.

The other comparison which I suggest is between the three fleets as they stand today, including ships built and building and appropriated for, and the same three fleets as they will stand in 1936 under our agreement. Taking these three fleets together there will be nine battleships scrapped and not replaced. Their combined tonnage is 230,130 tons. Their numbers are the same as the number of Japan's total fleet of battleships under the treaty.

Next there will be a reduction of 205,000 tons in the destroyers of the three powers. That amounts to nearly 40 per cent more destroyer tonnage than will remain in any of the three fleets in 1936.

Reduction in Submarines.

There will be a reduction of 68,000 tons in submarines, and that is nearly 16,000 tons more than will be allowed to any of the three countries in 1936.

In American cruisers there will be an actual increase under the new agreement. But this is due solely to the fact that we have been idle in cruiser building for nearly ten years and now find ourselves with less than a quarter of the normal proportion of cruisers which we should have in respect to the rest of our fleet. Therefore, in order to create a smaller but better-balanced fleet than we now have and to achieve parity with Great Britain it is necessary for us to increase our cruiser tonnage. This increase is comparatively small, because the British have agreed to reduce their tonnage by twenty cruisers in order to meet us, and for that same purpose the Japanese have agreed not to increase the number of their cruisers. As a result the total net reductions in the three fleets built, building and appropriated for is in the neighborhood of 460,000 tons. That reduction alone is greater than the total present Italian fleet.

Thus far, I have been speaking only of fighting ships. There are also, as you doubtless know, many service ships in the Navy which are not classed as combatant but in discussing economy these ships very properly enter into the picture. In the three fleets of Great Britain, Japan and the United States there are 220,000 tons of these ships which under our present agreement will not be replaced after they are retired for age. This means ultimately a reduction of 220,000 tons and a corresponding reduction in expenses.

Lowest Limitation Level.

In our present agreement we have reached the lowest level of limitation that I have ever heard seriously discussed before. We have reached a lower level than any of us on any delegation felt confident could be attained when we came here.

Furthermore, this conference has achieved certain great moral advantages. The experience of our negotiations has made it clear that naval rivalry between the United States and Great Britain is definitely at an end. No negotiations could have been more frank and cordial and satisfactory than those we have had with the British delegation. The same applies to our relations with the Japanese delegation. They have shown a readiness to join in the great aims of the conference which is beyond praise. The very great improvement in the friendly relations between the United States and Japan which followed the Washington conference will certainly be intensified and continued by this conference. As our naval problems do not reach those of France and Italy, we have not directly participated in the negotiations of those countries, but our contacts with their delegations have been uniformly friendly and we believe that we have contributed to the present spirit of good will which makes it now seem probable that they will ultimately agree among themselves and add the limitation of their fleets to our present treaty.

And now a word about our own delegation. It has consisted of seven delegates who have worked together as a harmonious group. Every decision of importance has been discussed by every member before it was taken and every such decision has been unanimous. In technical matters we have had the advice and assistance of Admiral Pratt, the commander in chief of the United States fleet, and his very effective assistants, and until his departure a few weeks ago on account of illness we had the able help of Admiral Jones. In addition to this, we have had the advantage of the wisdom and advice of the loyal and capable staff of the Department of State and the American Embassy in London.

We believe we have successfully accomplished the mission with which we have been intrusted by our country.

ITALO-FRENCH CLASH DELAYS NAVAL PARLEY TREATY DRAFT

section of the treaty believes that the building by a party not signing that section is such as to call for adjustment of total tonnage allocated to the three contracting powers, a meeting of the three powers shall be convened upon six months' notice. Some such additional phrase as the following may be added by the British: "In the event that no agreement is reached at such a conference, any of the high contracting parties may give notice of desire to terminate the present convention and notification shall be effective within one year of receipt thereof by the other parties to the treaty."

The United States, it is believed, will accept some such formula, although regretting Great Britain's inability to dispense with it. British agreement to summon a conference, if this still stands, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald having changed his mind once or twice, is welcomed by the Americans since the first British suggestion was that building in excess of the treaty could be commenced after simple notification.

It is believed that this delicate question has not been seriously debated up to the present.

U. S. Viewpoint Cited.

France will insist upon the right to build two battle cruisers designed as the most powerful and fastest in the world during the life of the treaty, and this is recognized in a draft clause prepared today whereby France and Italy agree to a battleship holiday until 1936 subject to the right to build 70,000 tons of capital ships as provided under the Washington treaty. It is feared that Italy will respond to French plans by also laying down battle cruisers, and the possible effect upon Great Britain, torn between efforts to maintain the Rapidan figures and the two-power continental standard at sea, is much to be apprehended because of its possible bearing upon British ability to stick to the treaty figures.

Hope Not Abandoned.

Hope that France would agree to a real battleship holiday was not abandoned finally until today and it is now admitted that France will not delay building to enable Great Britain to promise unconditional adherence for two years to the treaty figures, as was hoped she would do.

A draft clause was prepared today under which another conference will be summoned in 1935. The place of the meeting has not been decided and may be left open in the treaty.

The paeans of praise from the White House for our delegation's achievements and the laurels awarded themselves by British statesmen are paralleled by the claims of the French press that the conference here wipes out the shame of the Washington defeat of 1921 and represents a complete diplomatic victory for France. The Italian press, too, foreshadows probable official statements that Italy is the real victor, having circumvented attempts to place her in a position inferior to that of France. Financial figures of all kinds are flying about, "billion-dollar parity" statistics foreshadowing huge expenditures contrasting with British and American official estimates of the vast sums saved to taxpayers.

Dawes Trip Recalled.

The New York World News service's correspondent went with Ambassador Charles Gates Dawes to Scotland nearly a year ago and there witnessed the inception of these negotiations, traveled to Washington with Prime Minister MacDonald, has followed the progress of the conference throughout and is tempted to venture a personal estimate of the results achieved, viewed as objectively as possible.

Most stress is laid officially in British and American government circles on the parity agreement, but this was virtually reached, not at the Rapidan, but in the Dawes-MacDonald conversations here last summer. Mr. MacDonald definitely refused to go to Washington until Anglo-American understanding was certain, estimating the danger of failure after a personal visit too serious to be risked. When the marginal difference was narrowed down to only 30,000 tons he did go. The Anglo-American understanding, therefore, which is, of course, the preeminent achievement of the year, was not reached at this conference, but was merely not destroyed. For history that is unimportant, the main fact being that parity is now the declared and understood policy of each government.

Accomplishments of Conference.

To bring Japan into line with Great Britain and America was the next step and this is to the credit of the London conference. It is true that Japan got about 80 per cent of what she wanted, but her demands were not unreasonable and the agreement reached represents an act of statesmanship, not surrender, by the American and British delegations. The figures agreed upon are not open to reasonable attack. But there is no reason to suppose the same terms with Japan could not have been arrived at without any London conference.

The 85 days of work here have been chiefly employed in attempts to bring France and Italy into five-power tonnage limitation covering all classes of ships, thus facilitating general limitation of armaments and, from the point of view of the three chief naval powers, making the Anglo-American-Japanese agreement definite and not a set of figures subject to alteration through British reactions to the strengthening of continental navies.

Probably four-fifths of the work done at this conference—more, if the conversations between Senator David A. Reed and Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira be set aside—concerned with this aim. And that aim definitely failed. Moreover, the conference excited Franco-Italian rivalry, caused embittered press controversies and unhappily seems likely to increase both ill feeling and the pace of the building race between those two nations.

Safeguarding Clause Important.

The existence of an escalator or safeguarding clause in the three-power treaty is a measure of that failure. So that while much has been gained toward naval limitation a year ago, something has been lost since King George opened the conference, for the validity of the three-power figures depends entirely upon what France and Italy build and how Great Britain reacts to their building. Great Britain reserves in this treaty the right to build up to the two-power continental standard, which is what the safeguarding clause means, and whether she sticks to the three-power figures or not depends on incalculable factors, chiefly, perhaps, on whether a Labor or a Tory government is in power here during the life of the treaty.

But if the high hopes with which the conference began were dashed, the delegates will separate under far better auspices than seemed possible during February and March. There is good feeling between all delegations excepting two, and Franco-British bitterness has been assuaged, despite failure to agree. Credit for this is ascribable, in my opinion, solely to the Stimson-Morrow offer of a consulative pact a month ago when the conference was in extremes, an act requiring the greatest courage since it was made without consultation with Washington.

This stimulated Mr. MacDonald to a new effort to satisfy France, and brought Aristide Briand, who had walked out on the conference, hurrying back to London.

The security negotiations resulting convinced each side of the others sincerity, even in failure, and in the upshot Secretary of State Stimson will not have to worry about whether the check he drew on Washington would have been honored if presented. The check was in payment for a Franco-British deal that proved impossible and so has been returned with thanks and destroyed.

HARVARD JUNIOR, 20, DIES IN LONG PLUNGE

Father Thinks Youth Leaped From Six-Story Room Intentionally.

ON PARTY NIGHT BEFORE

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—The body of Dudley Davis, jr., 20-year-old Harvard junior and member of a wealthy New York family, was found early today beneath an open window of his parents' sixth-floor Park avenue apartment. Although police in their first report did not list the death as a suicide, the youth's father, Maj. Dudley Davis, life insurance attorney, expressed the belief the young man had taken his own life.

Maj. Davis said he knew of no reason for his son's act.

Young Davis was sharing his room with George Bullock, of Worcester, Mass., also a Harvard junior. Bullock said they had had supper together at the Harvard Club, where they met several friends. There was some drinking, he said, and they returned to the apartment about 1 a. m. He said the window was still closed when he went to sleep and he knew nothing of Davis' death until he was awakened by his companion's mother shortly after 3 a. m.

Mrs. Davis, the former Alice M. Grosvenor, of Providence, R. I., had become disturbed by noises in her son's room and informed her husband.

Maj. Davis investigated and found a window in his son's room open, went downstairs and discovered the body in the courtyard.

Conflicting descriptions of an iron grill which guards the window from which Davis apparently leaped were given by Maj. Davis and Dr. E. M. Josephson, who lives in the same building. Maj. Davis said the window was of "normal" size and the grill rose about 18 inches from the sill. Dr. Josephson said the grill covered the entire window and must have been wrenched loose.

Maj. Davis said his son had been doing well in college. He was on the wrestling squad at Harvard and was was a member of the Hasty Pudding and Fox Clubs.

Assistant Medical Examiner Fisher said the youth had committed suicide after climbing over the window grill, which he described as covering only part of the window. He added that his examination showed the young man had been drinking.

Brickbats & Bouquets

By JAMES HAY, JR.

DISPLAYING a well-nigh diabolical ingenuity, the big-game-hunting Mr. Tinkham has craftily arranged to subject Bishop James Cannon, jr., to a torturing, probing and pitiless publicity before the Senate lobby committee—thereby rendering the crusading cleric a priceless service.

As soon as the Massachusetts wet let it be known that he would sink the harpoon of inquiry into Dr. Cannon's past and person, the bishop took pen in hand and, in an outburst of ink and appreciation, informed Senator Caraway that he would "be glad to appear before the committee."

* * * *

HIS gladness is easily understood. The one particular thing of which the good doctor can make lavish and grateful use just now is publicity, pitiless or otherwise. He needs advertising, far flung and thunderous. He would enjoy being rejuvenated in the public memory.

For the politicians in Virginia, the bishop's native heath, report his influence so much on the wane that in some localities it has taken on a strange, but convincing similarity to the vanishing point.

There is no gainsaying the fact that, when the Virginia votes were counted in 1928, giving Mr. Hoover a majority, with three congressional districts won by Republicans, the doctor stood out as the Old Dominion's leaning tower of Piss, on which—or on whom—the anti-Smith people had done a lot of leaning.

BUT with the irony of fate or the the well-known all-round cussedness of politics, the word soon trickled forth that the new President was not exactly bruising his elbow with the weight of his leaning on the aforesaid tower of strength. And straightway the cleric's importance went down, the bishop himself went abroad, and the Cannon reign in the Old Dominion fell to pieces.

Naturally, therefore, when Mr. Tinkham exhibits the flattering suspicion that the doctor's lobbying propensities are worth investigating, he drops a very long rope of rescue into an exceedingly deep pool of obscurity.

* * * *

FROM the summit of his official position, so to speak, he lowers a ladder, up which the bishop can merrily trip until his head is bathed in the saving and gratifying effulgence given forth by the spotlight of senatorial inquisitiveness. And what could be sweeter than that? Small wonder if the doctor regards Mr. Tinkham as a prophet in Israel and, by the beard of that prophet, swears eternal gratitude!

There is, of course, the unkind charge that Dr. Cannon used his organization's funds to finance the anti-Smith meeting in Asheville, N. C., soon after the Houston convention. But if he did—which is yet unproved—the worst to be said of it is that it was a poor investment. And if the stock market news some time ago was correct, the good doctor is no stranger to poor investments.

NEW OPPOSITION IN SENATE PERILS PARKER CONFIRMATION

tion, picketing and the like, or by procuring them to breach their contracts with the plaintiffs.

"The trial court found that the defendants are maliciously endeavoring to cause the employes of the plaintiffs to violate their contracts of employment with the plaintiffs, and were, by force, intimidation and violence, endeavoring to compel the plaintiffs' employes to cease work, and enjoined these acts."

The memorandum related that the United Mine Workers challenged the district court decision on the ground of jurisdiction and also on the contention that the injunction was "too broad" and enjoined interference with the plaintiffs' employes "by means of peaceful persuasion."

The latter point is the one at issue. The American Federation of Labor complains that Judge Parker upheld the "yellow dog contracts," articles of agreement between employers and employes by which the latter subscribe not to join a union while under contract.

Employes of the Red Jacket Co. had signed the so-called "yellow dog contracts"—that they would not join the union while remaining in the plaintiffs' service. According to the Justice Department, Judge Parker relied on this point upon the decision of the Supreme Court in the Hitchman case, which denied the right of unions to persuade employes to break such contracts.

"There does not appear to be a point decided in the Red Jacket case," the memorandum continued, "on which Judge Parker assumed to exercise any independent judgment or opinion. He and his associates felt bound by the Supreme Court decisions. In holding the contracts valid and that peaceable efforts to induce nonunion men to break them were properly enjoined, he merely quoted rulings to that effect in the Hitchman case.

"Nowhere are pressed or indicated any personal views about any of these questions. He had no freedom of judgment on any of them; he was bound by the decisions of the Supreme Court, which he could not refuse to follow."

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Labor brought forth another attack upon the nomination.

William M. Green, president of the labor organization, said in a statement last night that "the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor can not believe that the Senate of the United States will confirm the nomination of Judge Parker as a member of the Supreme Court of the United States."

"It is inconceivable that a man who has shown such judicial bias against the working people of the country can be elevated to the highest judicial tribunal of the land," he continued. "The confirmation of Judge Parker would shake the confidence of the masses of the people in the Federal courts and would create widespread labor indignation."

Green said reports reaching him indicated that "the working people in all sections of the country are aroused as never before" in opposition to the selection of a Supreme Court Justice. He added that the Red Jacket coal decision "consigned thousands of coal miners in West Virginia to a condition bordering on industrial servitude."

"It is reasonable to conclude that if he became a member of the Supreme Court of the United States, he would carry to that honorable position his view and opinions so hostile to labor and so destructive of human rights as shown in the Red Jacket decision," he said.

Green called upon the Senate to reject the nomination.

thus is provided the proper authorities.

The regulations also contain definitions of required equipment. They specify that on a dry, hard, level road the footbrake system must be capable of stopping the car from a speed of 20 miles an hour within 50 feet. The distance of 75 feet is fixed as the required hand brake capacity.

Tail Light Must Show Tag.

Headlight bulbs must have a rating of 21 candlepower and the lamps so adjusted that the main portion of the beams rises no higher than 42 inches 75 feet in front of the vehicle. The tail light is required to show a red light visible at 500 feet and a white light illuminating the license tag that makes it visible at 50 feet.

Among other required equipment are a rear-vision mirror and "a suitable signaling device." Whenever a car is examined by the police, a test of the stop light is a part of the inspection.

Under the regulations, the police may stop an automobile at any time if they have reason to suspect defective equipment. An instance of the way they may avail themselves of this authority is cited by Inspector E. W. Brown, chief of the traffic bureau. Noticing that the driver of a car on a downtown street had to pull on the hand brake whenever he stopped his car, the inspector made an immediate personal investigation and found that the foot brake was virtually useless. Acting on his orders, members of the traffic squad require a brake test whenever they observe that a car is unable to stop within a reasonable distance upon their signal.

Selected in Two Ways.

Unfit cars are detected by the police in two ways, either when some obvious defect is noticed or when any vehicle is involved in an accident. The practice is to give the driver a summons if the defect is a minor one, or, if more serious, to order him to the traffic bureau testing station for a more careful inspection.

The traffic bureau has a member of its force subject to call at any time. Whenever there is an automobile accident he may be summoned by any police precinct. Upon responding he takes with him a decelerometer, or brake testing device, and checks on the brakes as a matter of routine.

The testing station maintained in the rear of the bureau, with entrance in the 1400 block of E street northwest, is open for voluntary headlight adjustments or brake tests without charge from 8 a. m. to 11 p. m. every day except Sundays and holidays.

Specific Cases Cited.

Instances of unsafe motor cars or trucks which have been the subject of investigation by the police show clearly the defective condition of many vehicles. Recently the owner of a truck was ordered to the traffic bureau testing station. There it was found that repairs costing several hundred dollars would be necessary to put the vehicle in safe operating condition.

Another car officially tested had a steering wheel which could be given a complete revolution before the front wheels responded. Still others have been examined, disclosing headlights with rusty reflectors, stop lights that did not function, horns that would not operate and other units which evidenced the owner's disregard for safety.

That the unsafe automobile must go from Washington traffic is the unquestioned dictum of all thoughtful students of safety. They point to the fact that the legal ban already is on the unfit car. Rigorous enforcement is the next step.

TRAIN ATTACHMENT HELD IN ABEYANCE

Coast Line Officials Tell Florida Authorities Taxes Will Be Paid.

FORCED SALE IS HALTED

Avon Park, Fla., April 13 (A.P.).—Atlantic Coast Line Railroad property, including a passenger train, three locomotives, motor and freight cars, and 60 miles of trackage, was released temporarily today from attachment made yesterday by Sheriff Oscar Wol., who levied for alleged unpaid taxes.

Train No. 192 was released in time to permit it to make its scheduled run today to Haines City. This train southbound is 191 and was levied upon yesterday at Sebring, Fla., where the mail contract terminated. There were no passengers aboard at the time of the seizure.

The release was ordered by County Attorney J. M. Lee after a conference with railroad officials at which, Mr. Lee said, he was given assurance the taxes would be paid promptly.

H. E. Franklin, of the Coast Line's division general counsel's office, assured Col. Lee the railroad would pay immediately following upon the settlement of a question of discrimination in assessment which is to come before a conference of State officials and railroad officers at Tallahassee tomorrow morning.

The county attorney has provided for a return of the property for placing under the original attachment, provided there is any undue delay in the settlement, Col. Lee stated.

Mr. Franklin arrived here today in time to halt the preparation of the official notice of sale of the attached property. He discussed the matter with Judge W. J. Barker, of the circuit court, but the jurist declined to intervene. Col. Lee said he assured Franklin that the reason for taking drastic action was "the refusal of the company's officials to discuss payment of taxes when the matter was brought to their attention following reports that seemed to have considerable support that the company had decided not to pay any taxes in Florida this year."

"Mr. Franklin branded these reports as untrue," the attorney said.

Capital Forum Hears Decisionless Debate

Ending without a decision, a debate on the subject, "Resolved, That There Is an Ultimate Purpose in Nature," was held yesterday afternoon at the Washington Open Forum at 808 I street northwest by Hugh F. Munro, of Philadelphia, and Woolsey Teller, of New York.

Mr. Munro, chairman of the Philadelphia Society for Psychical Research, took the affirmative. Mr. Teller is vice president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. Former Policeman Robert J. Allen, of Washington, and Dan O'Brien, self-styled hobo, will debate next Sunday on the subject, "Resolved, That Poverty Causes Crime."

MORE U. S. JUDGES AIM OF HOUSE BILLS

Bachmann. "This course involves no constitutional questions, such as the Wickersham proposals. It adheres to our present judicial system. Although the judges will be appointed for lifetime, I feel that the increasing business and the growing population will keep them busy even if prohibition prosecutions decrease."

Exclusive of those in the territories, the new program would increase the number of Federal district judges to 165. It would provide an additional judge for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, which includes Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and the Canal Zone.

The program would create a southern district in Kentucky and a middle district in West Virginia. In addition to a Federal judge for each, a district attorney and a United States marshal would have to be provided for each. New York State would receive the largest number of New judges, the total being five, one each for the eastern, western and northern districts and two in the southern district.

Other judges would be authorized as follows:

One each for the Western District of Washington, the Eastern District of Louisiana, the Northern District of the Southern District of Texas, the Eastern District of Michigan, two for the Supreme Court in the District of Columbia, one to assist judges in both the Northern and Southern Districts of California, one to aid the judges in the three Oklahoma districts and one for the Eastern and Western Districts of Missouri.

A measure already passed by the House which is pending in the Senate authorizes a Federal judge for Minnesota, but this was not considered, and neither was the Langley bill before the House judiciary committee to provide for an additional judge in Kentucky.

By RUDY VALLEE.

CHAPTER XXIII—WHEN HUBERT WAS CHANGED TO RUDY.

Portland is practically Maine, and that Strand Theater appearance did wonders for me because it made me quite an important musical figure in Maine. At the University of Maine, at which I matriculated in the fall, the Strand Theater appearance did much toward causing the fraternities to rush me. In fact, my saxophone brought me a great deal of happiness at the university.

During all this time I had not forgotten my resolve to make Wiedoeft some day acknowledge me, and I still followed all the musical magazines for news or notes about him. I had every record he had ever played on; I knew all the gossip there was to know about him; in fact, I ate, drank and talked Rudy Wiedoeft so much that it earned for me the nickname of "Rudy." I had been pledged by Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and I moved into a room there with three other boys. They had given me one wall of the room for my pictures, which were all of Wiedoeft. Every new man was brought into that room to listen to me play along with Wiedoeft's records, which I had learned to do by tuning the phonograph so that it corresponded with the pitch of my saxophone. Some fellow, seeing all these pictures and records, misunderstood, or perhaps intentionally began the monicker of "Rudy" from which I have never been able to get away. After a while it became so natural and pleasant and seemed to go so well with the "Vallee" that I hardly recognized my given name of "Hubert."

Nearly Froze While Practicing.

I was now confronted by the problem of preparing my studies, going to my classes, playing in the evening to earn my tuition, and yet continuing the study of the saxophone as a solo instrument. It sometimes took me hours to select and find a perfect reed. I went through dozens of reeds which I could ill afford before I found one that answered my purpose. I used the sleeping chamber of the fraternity house for practice in the afternoon until I realized that even there I disturbed the study of my brothers in the fraternity, so I moved next to the town hall, which was a mile from the campus. I engaged the opera house at a nominal cost per month to practice in. There were no offices in this two-story edifice, just a cellar and a small auditorium, consequently there was no heat during the day and very little even on the nights of functions. I purchased a small electric heater of the circular coil type, but no matter how I adjusted it, it only heated half of my body at a time, consequently, when by feet were being kept warm my fingers froze, and vice versa.

On one particular morning I was scheduled to play solos at chapel at noon. In order that my jaws and fingers should be in working order for the solo at noon, I got up at 5:30 in the morning and practiced from 6 to 7:30 in the cold town hall so that at noon I would be able to do justice to the songs. It was quite an effort, what with loss of sleep and suffering from the cold, but it was worth it.

Played While Reading.

Sometimes it did not seem as though I was going to have time to practice my low tones, which was the only way I could improve my tone and keep it constant, and since these long tones required no mental concentration I would practice them while reading over one of my courses of the interesting type, such as history or psychology, something where there was no figuring or mental perplexity. I had prepared two new Wiedoeft solos, which I presented at the Strand the first week of Christmas vacation.

An amusing incident occurred there that week. When I had been head usher in the theater several years previously, the director of the orchestra had been a rather irate individual, inclined to be very temperatuous. He also played the violin. One day as I watched him unpacking some violins from a case in which they had come he became annoyed with me, standing there and watching him, and ordered me out of the dressing room. Times had changed since I was head usher, and at this particular Christmas time he was only one of the violinists in the orchestra; the present leader, the young man who had asked me to do the solos, had returned from the Rhine where he had been with the Army of Occupation. As coincidence would have it, I occupied the same dressing room in which this former leader had unpacked his violins. I left nothing in it but my tuxedo hanging on the wall and never locked the door, since there was really nothing to take. One day I walked in to find several of the musicians smoking and talking in my room, which was on a level with the stage, their own room being down below and, believe it or not, this same violinist asked me if I minded their smoking in my dressing room! However, I bore him no ill will and did not remind him of the time when he had been quite unkind and I suppose he never remembered it.

Dream Came True at Easter.

At Easter vacation my dream came true. I had been writing to Wiedoeft's manager, Joseph Davis, who was also a music publisher, and in whose little office Wiedoeft had a still smaller room. Mr. Davis promised me that if I came to New York he would arrange an appointment, so at Easter time I set out with high hopes of meeting Rudy Wiedoeft, hearing Paul Whiteman, and making a solo on a record, for which privilege I paid $50, the savings of many months. All three of my dreams were realized and, of course, the greatest thrill was that of meeting my idol, whom I found to be just as gracious and charming as I hoped he would be. I asked him if I should give up my school and go into music entirely, and he replied that by all means I should get my college education, so I often thank Wiedoeft for helping me in my decision to secure my degree. He allowed me to watch his band recording and gave me several hours of his time, which, of course, was quite priceless. I have never forgotten his kindness and I resolved that some day I would repay him.

Decides to Transfer to Yale.

The next summer I had resolved to transfer to Yale, where there was more opportunity to work. Moreover, New Haven's proximity to New York guaranteed me many things. During the summer I received a wonderful offer to play in London for the winter at a very fine salary, with a guaranty of many records and concerts, and the opportunity to study at London University.

I gave no definite answer until I met the group of men who were sailing; luckily I met them only four days before they sailed when it was too late for me to get my passport, because they persuaded me to go. Rather than go alone, I turned it down and they sailed without me. Thus I can thank the regulations regarding passports for saving me from losing what I value most—my college education.

I entered Yale the following fall and still continued to practice. In a short while I found that I disturbed the other students in the dormitory by my practicing, so I paid 50 cents an afternoon for a Swedish fraternity hall where I practiced to my heart's content. It took quite a walk to reach it but the complete freedom that I experienced while practicing was worth it. I played at the dining hall nightly and played at country clubs and golf clubs and deb parties with the orchestra with which I was associated during my four years at college.

Haiti President Blocks Election

Council Is Adjourned by Borno to Stop Action Against Government.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti, April 13 (A.P.).—President Louis Borno today adjourned the council of state indefinitely, thereby preventing it from electing some one other than Eugene Roy, neutral candidate, for temporary president of Haiti tomorrow.

The action was taken, it was indicated, as a result of reliable reports that a majority of the council of 21 planned to go back on their agreement to support the new government plan given Haiti by the Hoover investigating commission. They wished to name a president other than Roy, who was the choice of the government and the opposition.

On Friday, the American State Department warned President Borno that no one other than M. Roy would be recognized as temporary president. Today President Borno took cognizance of the warning by adjourning the council, members of which he can appoint or dismiss at will. It is believed he will not allow the council to meet until the situation is cleared.

TWO CAPITAL MEN HURT AT CULPEPER

Auto Is Hurled Into Air After Hitting Bank at Side of Highway.

BOTH MEN UNCONSCIOUS

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., April 13.—John E. Mendes and Charles H. Manning, War Department clerks, were so seriously injured in an automobile crash near here today that an ambulance was sent from Walter Reed Hospital to return them to Washington.

They were unconscious when removed from the wreck of the car and after regaining consciousness were in such dazed condition that they were unable to tell what had happened. Eye-witnesses say that Mr Mendes, who was driving, lost control when meeting another car, and drove into the bank along the road. Striking the bank threw the car into the air and Sheriff J. J. Nash afterward made measurements which showed that it had sailed for 40 feet without touching the ground. When it landed it turned over several times, and finally came to rest so far from the road that the driver of the car which they had passed was unable to see it, although he backed up and stopped when he heard the crash. Thinking he was mistaken about hearing anything, he drove on.

The injured men were brought to Culpeper and given first aid by Dr H. T. Chei. At the time the wreck occurred they were returning to Washington by way of Culpeper and Warrenton, having left home early this morning to make the circuit by way of Winchester and Nemarket.

Trio Hurt in Crash With Trolley Car

Family Is Treated After Auto Is Demolished in Collision.

Three persons in an automobile narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when their machine was struck by an electric car at Clarke Station in Arlington County. Adolph Veitch, his wife and daughter Helen, 14 years old, were in the automobile, which was practically demolished.

The daughter was thrown through one of the side windows of the car and suffered deep cuts about the head, while her father and mother were bruised. The car, on the Arlington and Fairfax line, was in charge of Horace Elliott, motorman, and John Loveless, conductor.

Mrs. Veitch and her daughter were treated at Georgetown Hospital, where they were taken by Arlington County Policeman William H. Thompson.

MEETING WILL PLAN FINANCING FOR ROAD

Citizens of Fairfax County Urge Falls and Pohick Church Highway.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 99-J-1.

A mass meeting of citizens of Fairfax County, especially persons living in Falls Church, Mount Vernon and Lee districts, has been called tonight at 7:30 o'clock by Mason Hirst, of Annandale. The meeting will be held in the Annandale school house. Special invitations have been issued to every organization in the county. The purpose of the gathering is to discuss ways and means of financing th econstruction of a hard-surfaced road north and south across Fairfax County, which would connect Falls Church and Pohick Churches, in both of which Washington served as vestryman, and aided in building.

The Rev. C. A. Langston, rector of Pohick Church, will open the meeting. Mason Hirst will then outline the purpose of the session and Representative R. Walton Moore has been invited to speak. Former Senator Joseph L. Bristow, of Kansas, who now lives in Falls Church district, will address the meeting. Other speakers invited are F. Novell Larkin, county engineer; W. F. P. Reid, of Mount Vernon district, chairman of the county board of supervisors; C. H. Powell, of Baileys Cross Roads, supervisor for Falls Church district; Kyle Davis, supervisor for Lee district; Dr. F. W. Huddleson, county treasurer; Wilson M. Farr, commonwealth's attorney; Edmond H. Allan, of Newington, president of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce; Thomas R. Keith, of Fairfax, and Guy N. Church, of Falls Church. The meeting will close with a prayer by the Rev. Robert A. Castleman, rector of the Falls Church.

The project sponsored by Hirst and his friends calls for hard surfacing the present road from Pohick to Annandale by the way of Springfield. At Annandale it would connect with the present road to Falls Church and the Columbia pike already has been surfaced. This road would shorten the distance between two points by approximately 12 miles and would eliminate the necessity of travel through congested traffic in Alexandria, its supporters claim. This road has been graveled by the county highway department and a new grade crossing over the Southern Railway at Springfield has been completed. Hirst states that the road touches 20 district or State roads, of which siv are now hard surfaced, and that its improvement would be of great benefit to all north and south bound traffic.

County Engineer Larkin, on being interviewed in regard to this project, stated that he had made a "very rough" estimate of thecost of constructing the road. Because of its nearness to the county gravel pit the total costs would be approximately $80,000 for the necessary 8.5 miles. This estimate includes a new bridge at Accotink Run, which would cost about $10,000, and the roadway about $6,600 a mile, he believes. The rest of the estimate would be devoted to concrete and other necessary construction costs.

Engineer Larkin also states that, based on the present property valuations of these three districts, a bond issue in them for the construction of the road would mean, in Falls Church district, with approximately 1 mile of the road, the tax rate would be increased 10 cents; Mount Vernon, with about 6 miles, the increase would be 20 cents, and in Lee district an increase of 10 cents would be needed.

The Fairfax County Health Department will hold a public hearing tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the courthouse on the terms of the new county ordinance governing the methods of raising and feeding of hogs. Dr. Roy K. Flannagan, assistant director of the State department of public health, who drew up the ordinance, and the members of the local county board, consisting of W. F. P. Reid, chairman; Dr. R. E. Feagans, Dr. F. M. Brooks, Dr. C. A. Ransom, Dr. William P. Caton and F. W. Richardson will conduct the hearing.

Several months ago pressure was brought to bear on the Fairfax County officials by the residents of several communities. These persons claimed that the odors from the hog pens became such a nuisance that the value of their property in the neighborhood of these farms was greatly lowered, and that such conditions are a menace to public health through the pollution of streams and wells, together with the increase in the number of houseflies. In these communities, the farmers who raise hogs for market on a large scale are feeding them on garbage brought from Washington and Arlington County, residents say.

The tentative regulations that have been adopted by the board will become effective 30 days after publication in the county newspaper. After such publication, a failure to comply with the law becomes a misdemeanor punishable by a fine. The law requires among its provisions that garbage or other feed shall be placed on concrete platforms, which are to be cleaned off daily, and that the platforms shall be washed off withwater into septic tanks or cess pools, or streams of a large volume of water.

The majority of hog raisers are willing to cooperate with the health department, but they strenuously object to the daily flushing. They claim that this is not practical, and that within a short time the septic tanks and cesspools would be flooded, as the clay-like soil in the vicinity would not absorb the refuse fast enough. With too much water around, the conditions would soon be worse than it is now, they claim.

Certain changes in the regulations have been suggested which, it is believed, will achieve the desired results more closely than the tentative regulations, and it is expected that the terms of the regulations originally adopted will be modified to some extent to meet the objections raised by the farmers.

Jefferson's birthday will be celebrated today in the schools of Fairfax County. Divisional Superintendent of School Wilber T. Woodson has requested the principals to stress events of his life during school assembly period. Each teacher has been urged to emphasize in their lessons for the day the Virginia statute of religious liberty, which Jefferson helped to write, and also the making of Monticello, the home of Jefferson, a national shrine.

Mayor Edgar T. Bennett of Vienna has issued a proclamation for observance of "Spring Clean Up Week" beginning today. All householders are requested to put their rubbish in sacks and place them on the street so they may be collected.

Capt. John F. Bethune, mayor of Falls Church, is issuing notices to all citizens that the town council has designated May 14 to 19 as "Spring Clean Up Week" for that town. Benjamin P. Elliott has been awarded the contract of hauling and the mayor is urging citizens to cooperate.

A volunteer fire department is being organized among the men of Clifton by C. R. Buckley. A collection is being started to aid the purchase of modern fire fighting equipment. An organization meeting will be held some time after Easter. The destruction of Weaver's store last month by a fire which threatened to destroy a large portion of the town, has brought the movement for a local fire fighting equipment.

The members of the Mount Vernon Grange plan to attend the meeting of the Pioneer Grange at Masonville tomorrow night and take charge of the program during the lecturer's hour. Mrs. D. J. Garber, lecturer of Mount Vernon Grange, will have charge of the program.

At the annual meeting of the Flint Hill Cemetery Association, C. H. Spear, Harvey Johnson, Henry Hauxhurst, Dr. F. M. Brooks and Ronald Blake were selected directors. The directors then reelected C. H. Spear, president; Harvey Johnson, vice president; Henry Hauxhurst, secretary, and Dr. F. M. Brooks, treasurer. The building of a circular driveway of gravel within the cemetery ground and the removal of several of the large trees were discussed, and it was decided to have County Engineer F. N. Larkin give estimates on the cost of this work. The board of directors planned to hold a meeting some time in the near future to consider the estimates and, if possible, have the road constructed before Decoration Day.

Mrs. Carroll V. Shreve was reelected president of the Women's Club at Falls Church. Other officers were Mrs. Fred Jones, first vice president; Mrs. O. B. Livingston, second vice president; Mrs. J. H. Hill, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. R. Browning, recording secretary, and Mrs. A. H. Barbor, treasurer. Mrs. J. S. Higgins was elected delegate to the State Federation of Women's Clubs convention which is to be held in Danville, Va., about the middle of next month.

The Lewinsville Presbyterian Church has elected J. H. Beattie and U. E. Blair as delegates to the annual meeting of the Washington Presbytery which will be held in Washington today.

There will be a meeting of the Fairfax Parent-Teacher Association at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the auditorium of the Fairfax School. Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamans, Fairfax County health nurse, will give a talk on "Five-Point Children."

Game Warden A. B. Carter has practically completed releasing Mexican quail sent him by the State Department of Game and Inland Fisheries. This is a part of the State's program of restocking the game supply in the various counties. The birds were released in different sections of Fairfax County, where conditions were favorable for the birds' existence. Each bird has a metal band about its leg, and persons shooting the quail during next hunting season are requested by the State Department to return this band to them.

The Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department will hold its annual election of officers at its meeting tonight.

The regular weekly meeting of the Accotink Lodge of Odd Fellows will be held tonight in the I. O. O. F. Hall at Accotink.

The Groveton Community Club will hold its regular meeting at 8 o clock tomorrow night in the Groveton School. At the close of the business session an entertainment will be presented by the following members of the club: Franklin Reid, Cabell Painter, Aubrey Burdette, Josephine Painter, Mary Lewis Reid, Vera Burdette and Isobell Painter.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

TRIUMPH of all the sitting representatives in the Illinois primaries, while the sitting senator was being overwhelmed beneath the Ruth McCormick tidal wave, does not seem to reassure the Pennsylvania members very much. Many of them are having hard fights, and prohibition is making mountains out of what they had expected to be molehills.

Nobody running for office in the Keystone State this year seems really happy except Gifford Pinchot, who loves running for office and the turmoil of politics as some men like poker, and others golf. So strongly dry that when he was governor he compelled every man he appointed to office to sign a pledge to obey the Volstead act, and put the State constabulary to enforcing prohibition, there is no doubt where he stands.

* * * *

BUT take Francis Shunk Brown, candidate of the Vare organization for governor. Every thing seemed plain sailing for him, after the retirement of Senator Grundy's candidate, Sam S. Lewis. But no. The wets put up Thomas W. Phillips while Brown was trimming, and Brown has been concerned ever since. His friends tried to get Phillips out of the race, and finally persuaded Brown, somewhat against his will, for although inclined to be wet he believes the State is 65 per cent dry, to say he favored a referendum on repealing the State enforcement act.

He will probably win, for the organizations in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh will pile up an enormous vote for him. But Phillips got 76,000 votes four years ago, and he may get anywhere from 100,000 to 200,000 this time. Nobody knows. That is the trouble. He may possibly get enough votes to nominate Pinchot. The wets are satisfied. They say of Phillips' candidacy should have the effect of electing Pinchot, next time the regulars will have enough sense to come out wet.

* * * *

IN short, the wets are trying the same game in Pennsylvania this year that the drys played in New York in 1926, when they put up a dry Republican against Senator Wadsworth, hoping not to elect their dry but to punish the Republicans for nominating a wet. They succeeded in electing wet Senator Wagner.

But in addition to this, there is trouble over the prohibition issue in about ten congressional districts, serious enough to worry the Republican leaders. One of the most amusing—to an outsider, it is very serious there—of these situations is in the Twenty-second District, comprising York and Adams Counties. If Representative Franklin Menges had been willing to reappoint Ed S. Brooks, former member of the House, as postmaster of York, there would probably have been no trouble, but he would not. Whereupon Brooks has entered the race against him on a wringing wet platform.

* * * *

THIS has so obviously torn the Republican ranks, especially with Sam Lewis, Grundy's starter for governor, backing Brooks, that the Democratic hopes are soaring. Five men are after the Democratic nomination, in what is normally a safely Republican district.

Up in the old Casey district, around Easton and Bethlehem (they have a Nazareth, too) Everitt Kent, former Democratic representative, is worrying the organization by making a wet appeal in what seems to be a very wet district against Representative Coyle, Republican.

* * * *

IN THE Scranton district Judge Maxey, the Republican boss, and Vare candidate for the State bench, has forced a candidate on his organization most of the leaders do not fancy. So the threat of Pat J. Boland, a wet Democrat, is menacing. Former Representative John R. Farr, Republican, has complicated the situation by entering the race and declaring for a referendum.

In the Johnstown district, the Twentieth, J. Russell Leech, sitting dry Republican, is battling both a wet and a dry in his primary, knowing he will have to face a wet Democrat, George E. Wolfe, if he wins. The district has always been close. In former years Warren Worth Bailey, friend of William Jennings Bryan but a wet, was elected several times.

Adam Wyant, veteran member from the Thirty-first District, around Greensburg, just east of Pittsburgh, is also having the pleasure of fighting both a wet and a dry in his primary, while he tries to straddle, and the Democrats look hopefully toward November.

THE THREE-POWER PACT.

The MacDonald government is evidently laboring under conflicting emotions as it views the prospect of a limitation of naval power at the very time when France and Italy threaten to increase their naval strength. The pressure for an agreement with the United States is very strong, since it will mean a saving to Great Britain of many millions pounds for new naval construction. This prospective saving, in view of the national deficit and the necessity of imposing new and heavy taxes, will be one of the arguments put forth this week when Philip Snowden submits the budget.

At the same time, the British people look with apprehension upon the increase of continental fleets without a corresponding increase in British strength at sea. There is no concealing the intense disappointment over the failure to bring France and Italy into an accord. Mr. MacDonald has failed at a vital point, and not all the advantages gained by the tripartite treaty will offset the dangers that would arise if France and Italy should become independent of British sea power. This fact is pressed home by the naval experts in England, supported by the first lord of the admiralty, who insists upon a safeguarding clause in the treaty with the United States and Japan, permitting Britain to build if France should carry out her naval program.

In his radio address yesterday, Secretary Stimson made the statement that the purpose of naval limitation in all elements of the fleet has been achieved. "There can now be no competition between us," he asserted. "The relation of the fleets is fixed."

It is difficult to reconcile this statement with the safeguarding clause which Great Britain demands, and which is now being drafted. The limitation of the British, American and Japanese fleets seems to depend upon the action of France, and France is not bound by treaty. There is confident assurance that France will not resort to building, and that Britain in any event would build only a few destroyers to meet French submarine building; but these unofficial and extratreaty assurances mean nothing. Similar assurances were given during the Washington conference with respect to cruiser building. Mr. Balfour declared that the spirit of the Washington treaty called for parity in all kinds of ships, and he conveyed the distinct impression to Americans that Britain would not resort to building 10,000-ton cruisers. But Britain did build such ships, and now has a heavy preponderance of cruiser tonnage over the United States.

"In American cruisers there will be an actual increase under the new agreement," said Mr. Stimson yesterday. "But this is due solely to the fact that we have been idle in cruiser building for nearly ten years. In order to achieve parity with Great Britain it is necessary for us to increase our cruiser tonnage." It was declared that the Washington conference marked the end of naval competition. "Naval competition is ended," was Secretary Hughes' broad statement at the end of that conference. His statement and that delivered yesterday by Mr. Stimson are remarkably alike.

Until the three-power treaty has been completed and published textually it will not be possible to weigh its actual meaning and probable consequences. The Senate must take into consideration many factors. There should be no disposition to pick flaws in the treaty for the purpose of embarrassing the Hoover administration. Although the five-power conference has failed, in an important sense, it may be that enough has been accomplished to make it wise to ratify the treaty. Several months will elapse before the Senate will vote upon the treaty, during which time events in Europe may take a favorable turn and minimize the importance of the safeguarding clause.

PRIVATE SHIP OPERATION.

Since the United States Lines were sold to the Chapman interests there has been constantly in evidence a tendency on the part of a few Government officials and members of Congress to heckle and harass the new owners in the operation of the fleet. Notwithstanding this attitude the owners have gone ahead with the work of building up the service. The fleet has been reconditioned. Service has been greatly improved. That the public has responded to the improvement is evident from a statement recently released to the effect that bookings on the Leviathan up to March 31 were $800,000 ahead of those of the first three months of 1929.

The increase in business under private operation is a commentary on Government ownership. It calls to mind the initial voyage of the Leviathan under private ownership a little over a year ago. When she sailed down the bay from New York harbor her personnel was reduced by about 100. These extra employes, according to a statement issued by the executive vice president of the lines, had had no regular duties and had been maintained on the pay roll "for no good reason." Their salaries averaged $90 a month, in addition to which they were furnished with living quarters, frequently in sections of the boat where the demand for added passenger space was most serious, and they were given their meals. Here was another significant commentary on the Government in business.

The Government can create jobs, but it can not easily take them away. The Government can pour money into an enterprise, but lacking the penalty for inefficiency or extravagance there is little likelihood that competition can be met. The story of the Leviathan is of interest in connection with Muscle Shoals. It should be recited whenever a project for putting the Government into business is advanced.

DEATH TRAPS.

A few years ago it was hoped that traffic accidents could be reduced by educational campaigns. Much time and money have been spent in trying to teach the public safety habits, but the accident rate keeps on mounting. The current tendency is to remove the cause of traffic accidents wherever possible.

One of the most notable movements toward this end is the elimination of grade crossings. Every place at which a highway and railroad track intersect is a source of danger. Approximately 2,000 persons lose their lives at such points every year, and many times that number are injured. The fact that many of these crashes are caused by automobiles running into the side of a train denotes the failure of the educational campaigns in this respect.

"Elimination of grade crossings," says the Bureau of Public Roads, "is the only positive means of reducing the heavy toll of human life taken annually at points where highways and railways cross. The various protective devices, including gates and watchmen, though necessary until elimination can be effected, do not afford adequate protection on heavily traveled roads, and are objectionable also because of their obstruction of the free movement of traffic on the highways."

The bureau reports that during 1929 a total of 385 railway grade crossings were removed from the Federal-aid highway system. During the last twelve years 4,676 crossings of this kind have been eliminated. The number of eliminations for the entire system of American highways is, of course, much larger. It is interesting to note that about 80 per cent of these danger points are made safe by relocation of highways so as to avoid railway tracks. Of the 385 crossings removed last year only 48 required construction of viaducts or underpasses. Scientific highway planning is making the construction of costly grade-separating bridges unnecessary, except in rare instances. New highways are no longer built in such a way that they become death traps. But the expenditure of millions of dollars is necessary to correct the careless highway engineering of past decades.

MOVIE DECENCY.

The code of ethics adopted recently by the motion picture industry has been praised as constituting a public expression of the desire of movie producers to elevate the standard of their product, and has been criticized as constituting merely a sop thrown out in an attempt to gain the good graces of those who have made no attempt to conceal their disgust with the movies, and who have championed the cause of official censorship. Probably the code stands between the two. Certainly the industry, or a substantial part of it, is interested in improving its product ethically and morally. Assuredly the entire industry is working to sidetrack official censorship. The code, if it is rigorously enforced, as there is reason to believe it will be, should result in an elevated standard and go far toward answering those who champion official censorship.

The code, however, needs amplification. As drawn, it concerns itself with the content of the picture alone, saying nothing as to the title or method of exploitation. It is not often any more that one sees a picture in which the standards of good taste or decency are violated. One must except, of course, the products of the several producers who deliberately and blatantly pander to depravity. But the titles that are tacked on movies that are of themselves entirely inoffensive are often disgusting, and the advertising of inoffensive movies frequently makes use of illustrations calculated to create the idea that the risque is to be exhibited. Producers may believe that misleading titles and advertising of this nature are necessary to stimulate attendance, but they fail to reckon with the fact that they create a backfire of opposition and lead to the impression that the movies themselves are produced without regard to good taste or decency.

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, describes the new code as "but another step in the direction of the aims of the industry for the past eight years to furnish wholesome pictures." Genuinely wholesome pictures can not be called a reality until they are titled wholesomely and marketed with wholesome exploitation.

VETERANS' AGENCIES.

Once a Government agency is established, it defies destruction. The fate that awaited the Williamson bill proves as much. The measure was drawn to effect the consolidation of various veterans' relief agencies under a single administrative head, and it bore the support of President Hoover as well as of the general public. But when the measure finally reached the floor of the House, the clause that would permit the President to "consolidate, eliminate or redistribute the functions of the bureaus, agencies, offices, or activities in the administration of veterans' affairs and to create new ones therein" was stricken out. The House was taking no chances that the Pension Bureau, the source of desirable jobs for constituents, or other agencies, would be destroyed.

Veterans' relief should be consolidated under a single head. At present, the Veterans' Bureau, the Pension Bureau and the National Soldiers' Home spend a total of about $780,000,000 yearly for the relief and hospitalization of the veterans of America's wars. The Veterans' Bureau is only beginning to come into its peak activity. The Pension Bureau, which administers relief to veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American War and their dependents, has passed its peak activity. In the interest of economical and efficient administration it would be the part of wisdom to balance the activity of these two bureaus, but the House cut from the enabling bill the very paragraph that would make possible the efficient administration of a unified agency.

The action was taken while the House was in committee of the whole. House leaders hope to reverse the decision when the measure is brought forward for final action and when a complement of administration Republicans is on hand. It is to be hoped that they will succeed. The public is coming more and more to demand efficiency in the conduct of public business; it will not look lightly upon an effort to submerge efficiency to political expediency.

THE FILIPINO EXCLUSION QUESTION

By VICENTE VILLAMIN.

There are today some 40,000 Filipinos on the Pacific Coast, or about 6 per cent of the total population of that section. Most of them are of the laboring class. They are employed as farmhands on beet and lettuce fields and other farm work that Americans do not usually care to do. Many are engaged as domestics and not a few are self-supporting students.

They do not come to stay. Intermarriage is the rarest exception. Only 2 per cent of them are women. Left in that state, they will eventually be extinct. Certainly they do not contribute to the building up of the Philippine population.

They do not own land or dwellings and they have only a few small shops. It is safe to state that fully 90 per cent of their earnings are spent locally. Undoubtedly they are an economic loss to their country, while they must be an economic asset to the States where they work.

Delegations from the Pacific Coast are now telling the House committee on immigration and naturalization that the Filipinos in their midst have become a serious police, social and economic problem. The problem is there and it is folly to ignore it.

The question is highly inflammable. It needs the most dispassionate treatment. In view of the political relations between America and the Philippines it is wise to be conservative and considerate in the portrayal of the situation to avoid unnecessary bitterness. An equitable solution is what is desired by all, and the spirit of friendly cooperation should motivate the parties to the question.

The bill sponsored by Representative Welch, of California, undertakes to solve the problem in a legalistic manner by declaring the Filipinos aliens and therefore to be excluded from the United States upon the same basis as the Japanese, Chinese and other Asian peoples. This measure would not remedy the prevailing situation, and would be incompatible with America's position and policy in the Philippines and violative of America's self-imposed obligations to the Filipinos. The emphatic refusal of Congress to sanction the restriction of the free entry of Philippine products under the Hawley-Smoot tariff measure, a proposal that is less revolutionary than the exclusion of Filipinos, foreshadows the doom of the Welch bill.

The grant of immediate independence to the Philippines is not the solution, because America is not yet ready to take that step for a great many reasons of vital national and international import. There is no overpopulation in the Philippines, no mass emigration of Filipinos to a temperate country. Work is becoming more plentiful in the Philippines, wages and living conditions are getting better, and the tale of woe and hardship of Filipino laborers in America is deterring many a Filipino youth from leaving his native land.

Some Filipinos in America say, "Give us independence and we'll take the first boat to the islands." This is plain buncombe. In the first place, they do not have the fare. In the second, most of them won't go back home without savings or a school diploma, which only very few of them have. And in the third, they left home principally because of lack of work, and under the regime of independence there would be less work. Movements of big blocks of the laboring class of the population are governed by economic considerations.

Others warn, "Give us independence or we'll come to America en masse and justify the worst fears of the Californians." Of course, no such debacle is going to happen, because it is obviously impossible. If in the unlikely event it does come to pass in a small degree the political ulterior motive of the act will give America the moral justification to adopt the most effective protective measures.

Holding the foregoing formulas of solutions as either impracticable or oppressive, the following solution is suggested: Let the Hawaiian sugar planters refuse to employ Filipinos coming direct from the Philippines, and let them meet their labor needs by recruiting the Filipinos now on the Pacific Coast.

The plan will solve four related problems, to wit: (a) It will keep the Filipinos from leaving the Philippines in great numbers; (b) it should appease the Filipino exclusionist agitation in America; (c) it will meet the Filipino unemployment problem on the Pacific Coast; (d) and it will satisfy the need of Hawaii for Filipino labor.

The majority of the Filipinos on the Pacific Coast came from Hawaii, whither they were brought by the Hawaiian planters as contract laborers. They moved to the mainland, thinking they would improve their economic condition, only to experience the saddest disillusionment. It is believed, especially at this time, that many of them can be induced to return to Hawaii and take up their old jobs. Contrary to general belief, most of these Filipinos are peaceful, tractable, and efficient when given fair treatment.

The Filipinos in Hawaii are a source of substantial cash income to the Philippines, the yearly remittances amounting to over $5,000,000. It is reported they have over $3,000,000 in deposit in Hawaiian banks. The planters accord them fair treatment, look after their welfare and extend to them opportunity for improvement.

It is well for the United States to have Filipino laborers in Hawaii instead of other nationalities, because in case of a national emergency these Filipinos will stand by America in defense of the American flag. Then at the same time the Pacific Coast can have a reasonable number of Filipino laborers, because American agriculture especially needs them and wants them.

In the meantime Filipino leaders in and out of the Government should band together and start social work among the Filipinos on the Pacific Coast. Greater attendance in night schools will thin the throng in dancehalls and other centers of dissipation. The results of such work should satisfy Filipino pride and make for general improvement of the situation.

Disconcerting.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE TUMBLE WEED.

Somewhere I saw a tumble weed
Being blown along the busy street;
With every gust it gathered speed,
It rolled among the horses' feet.

It had no choice to rest or go,
To change its course it had no will.
Or up or down or high or low
The wind was master of it still.

And as it bounced along the way
It left a trail of tiny seeds
That would upon a later day
Give to the breeze more tumble weeds.

I gave that poor, frail thing a glance
And wondered as it swept along
What man would be if left to chance,
Without the faith that makes him strong.

You Can't Choose the Route of Travel If You Quit the Caravan.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

DEATH-BED promises are no more binding than a contract signed at the open end of a gun.

They are obtained by taking unfair advantage of sorrow and fright.

"Promise me," the dying parent commands, "that you will not marry Jim—that you will quit the stage—that you will obey your older brother—that you never will sell the old home."

It is the last desperate cry of defeated egoism.

It is blind selfishness foolishly striving to impose its will by trickery.

It is an effort of the dead to rule the living.

And if the living, frantic with grief and dread, give the pledge that is demanded, they are absolved when it has served its purpose and made death less dreadful.

Let the dead lie still and leave life to the living.

A promise that seems required by wisdom today may prove the worst of handicaps tomorrow.

Promises are pregnant with possibilities of evil and injustice, and none have a right to require them except those who are entitled to unquestioning obedience—and even these have no right to demand pledges that will outlive present conditions.

A parent or employer or superior officer may justly require a promise that can be fulfilled within a week or a month, but no one of them can rightfully demand a pledge that will outlive the situation that justified it.

What right has anybody except a master to demand a promise that is nothing more nor less than an agreement to obey?

To demand a promise is to say in effect: "While we are together I can impose my will on you, but you might regain your freedom if we separate and to prevent that I demand that you give your sense of honor the task of imposing my will on you when I am gone."

That is a sorry trade, requiring much and giving nothing.

The only fair contract is one that profits both parties, giving each value in return for value; but promises usually are exacted by force or trickery and offer nothing in return.

They are uniformly unfair in origin and frequently unjust in their ultimate execution.

And though a living master may have the right to demand a promise, since he can give release when conditions change, the dead have no shadow of right to shackle the living with their selfish desires.

It is a foolish custom, rooted in ignorance and fearful superstition, that permits the dead to divide property and dictate terms to the living.

It is even more foolish to keep a living intelligence enslaved to a will that no longer exists.

If the dying are wise enough to rule the future, let us assume that they would be wise enough to change their minds as conditions change.

When television is perfected you will presumably be able to get the funny pages, cross-word puzzles and intimate pictures of all the principals in the Heiress Poisoned on Escalator Ride Mystery.

• • • •

There will, of course, be certain home life complications when father insists upon tuning in on the sporting section while the children bellow for the comics and mother demands the woman's page with the latest recipe for preparing fricassee of snipe.

• • • •

Home, sweet home, will be noticeably soured when dad has tuned into Station WBCX with its thrilling account of the latest bank robbery, and Aunt Loretta furtively twists the dial to Station BVFG for the society news, classified ads and letters from the people.

The invention opens new possibilities for the circulation manager. His ability will probably be judged by his fan mail.

• • • •

"Say, I didn't get my evening paper last night," a subscriber may complain by telephone to the Pioneer-Scandalizer.

"We delivered it," the office will insist. "Your A batteries must be dead."

• • • •

Ultimately, of course, if the radio newspaper idea is carried to the limit, a newspaper will be regarded merely as an entertainment feature of some tooth paste hour. More talent on newspaper staffs will be essential. The managing editor will have to play the clarinet, the city editor's ability will be fixed by his yodeling skill and no reporter will have much chance unless he has "air charm."

It is even possible that the Nation's greatest newspaper editor may be Rudy Vallee.

LIFE (Variation No. 8654).

A little while to make a pile
And thumb the nose at cranks and scoffers;
Some lovely women, song and wine
To sap our strength and drain our coffers;
Then to the grave by six men borne—
And no more paring of that corn!

BELIEVE IT OR NOT.

"How do you feel?" a bystander asked one of those Indian salt rebels.
"Fine and Gandhi!" he replied.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

How a Chicago Judge Dealt With an Automobile Thief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the arrival of warm weather there will undoubtedly be some violations of the Dyer motor vehicle law. Recently a culprit was convicted on charges of conspiracy to violate this law in Chicago. The offender, who had appealed for mercy, accepted a drastic probation order rather than serve two years in Leavenworth Penitentiary, besides paying a fine of $1,000.

The probation order, which was dictated from the bench by Judge Woodward, is as follows: "You shall sell your automobile at once. You shall have no joy rides in automobiles or airplanes. You shall not own or possess an automobile directly or indirectly. You shall not drive in an automobile for more than a radius of 50 miles, and that only in the daytime and directly in connection with your employment. You must not drink intoxicating liquor. You must not visit places of gambling or any other establishment where intoxicating liquor is sold. You may visit your mother in Chicago once a month for a period of five days, traveling to and from Chicago by the shortest route, but not by automobile. At the expiration of your visit you must report to your probation officer, in the form of a sworn affidavit, the places you visited, the theaters, moving picture houses, &c. The violation of these conditions in letter or in spirit will mean your immediate incarceration."

The term of probation covers a period of five years. Judge Woodward advised the offender to study the conditions of the order and "realize their full significance" before accepting them. The terms were accepted and duly filed. If the order is followed for a period of five years without violating any of its terms, the culprit should have acquired the habit of being a law-abiding citizen. C. A. J.

Police Cruising Cars With Radio Effective in Overhauling Fugitives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Detroit Police Department placed two radio equipped automobile cruisers into service April 7, 1928. The system has resulted in many speedy arrests since that time. The arrests have totaled more than 2,700, at an average time of 90 second each.

The two cruisers first employed by the department had crews of four men each. The cruisers contained loud speakers and receiving sets. Now there are eight powerful cruisers accompanied by a fleet of 28 scout cars which patrol the streets of Detroit. These are individually and collectively subject on an instant's notice to the orders of the police dispatcher and radio operator.

The two cruisers made 8 arrests the first month, made 114 runs and were given 1,462 messages. In March, 1930, the crews of this type of police car made 422 arrests and 2,702 runs, and were given 5,301 messages. The average time required to apprehend a fugitive was a minute and a half.

Commissioner Rutledge extols the use of radio and terms it the most forward step in police work during his 35 years with the department. The arrests, he says, are "the most spectacular in police history." Many other cities have followed the example set by the Detroit Police Department and added radio-equipped cruisers to their police departments. More cities throughout the United States will do likewise when the benefits derived from this system are fully realized. Scotland Yard and the Berlin police have radio systems in use. F. P. M.

Medium-Sized Guy Puts in a Word for Runts and Giants.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Cardiff, Wales, there has been a club formed by a group of men who are 6 feet tall and over. The purpose of the club is to get the designers of furniture, street car seats, movie seats, &c., to consider the tall man as well as the runt. Most everything is constructed for the comfort of the average person, but if designers wish to make all persons comfortable they will have to provide for runts as well as giants.

The tall men's club will probably not achieve its aim of getting things built for their comfort alone. They should be considered, as they are often very uncomfortable sitting in a seat with their legs all cramped up. But the short person is uncomfortable, too, when his legs fail to touch the ground. A change in designs for the purpose of making all happy would lead to a great deal of trouble and would cost a vast amount of money. As I am of a medium height, I think it would be better to let well enough alone. A. R. L.

The London Conference Treaty Tends to Establish World Order.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: America, Britain and Japan come out of the London conference in a new concord of world powers. The pride of Japan kept her in this concord. The vanity of France and the envy of Italy kept them out of it.

Great Britain's two-power naval policy as against the continental states remains unaffected in substance. Its diplomatic application to France and Italy may be counted upon to forestall any Gallic-Roman combination to challenge Great Britain upon a basis of naval parity. The British may be depended upon to take care of that.

The argument at London takes firm forward ground. It should be consolidated in the interest of world order. SAMUEL RUSSELL.

PARKING REGULATIONS.

Automobiles parked in violation of the regulations in Philadelphia are towed to the police garage, and a fine and the cost of towing must be paid before the owner can regain the car, according to the Ohio State Journal. Efforts to stop the towing failed when the courts said it was a proper proceeding for the police. With that victory the police traffic squad redoubled its activities.

The court handed down a strong decision, pointing out that the streets belong to the public, that all the space in the streets is so included, and may not be used for the convenience of the few in storing their cars. If car owners do not want to find their cars at the police garage with a fine and towing charge to be paid, they may park according to the regulations. If they disregard the law they must pay.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Autumn Buds Already Plan Capital Bow

List of Washingtonians to Be Presented Is Made Known.

WEAVING the web of days that tangle an autumn season the 1930 debutantes take time by the forelock as they thread their shuttles and set to the task of coming-out dates. Intricate is the pattern and bordered, too, with criss-cross stitches and woe to the weaver if error occurs for a crooked design spells a wavering season.

So a stitch in time saves nine, sings the maid—or rather, her mother, who knows full well the value of social bureaus which, be it known, are the busiest spots in town just now.

For dates are crowding in and the calendar is filling up. A golden season it's going to be with buds from the Cabinet and from congressional sets and from important circles of society, to say nothing of two great granddaughters of a President—Miss Clara Grant and Miss Edith Grant, daughters of Col. U. S. Grant 3d, grandson of President Ulysses S. Grant.

Topping the list as cabinet bud is Miss Caroline Hyde, daughter of Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Hyde, who, already, knows pretty well the path of the deb, for she followed its meanderings during vacation time, probably taking note of the lights and shadows with a view to avoiding the latter next fall. An easy craft for the tactful Miss Caroline whose poise and popularity this winter were universally conceded.

Whether the Senate will present a "favorite daughter" depends upon the whims and fancies of voters in the State of Illinois. Miss Katrina McCormick will make her bow, but the ballots must decide whether she smiles beneath the banner of victory and is introduced by her mother, "Senator" Ruth Hanna McCormick, or whether she shall represent the House as daughter of a representative. If the mantle falls upon her mother then will Miss Katrina forge a new trail as the first debutante introduced by a maternal senator.

The House of Representatives will have, doubtless, several buds. Listed now is Miss Mary Corning, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Parker Corning.

A flutter of excitement attends the announcement that Col. and Mrs. U. S. Grant 3d will present their daughters, Miss Clara Grant and Miss Edith Grant. The latter will be graduated from Bryn Mawr in June and, 'tis said, with honors.

Behind the Grant girls the loom of life has woven a background of rare and distinctive pattern. On their maternal side they are the granddaughters of Elihu Root, former Secretary of State, lawyer of international renown, former Senator of New York and author of the Root formula of the World Court.

Included in this notable family is Princess Cantacuzene, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant and the late Mr. Grant, who had the distinction of being born in the White House. Her marriage to Maj. Gen. Cantacuzene, Count Speransky, of the Russian nobility, was an event of 1899, and was followed by a prolonged residence in Russia. Princess Cantacuzene has made her mark in the literary field, being the author of several books. Among them are "My Life, Here and There" and "Revolutionary Days."

Miss Audrey Brooks will be another interesting debutante. She is attending school abroad, but will pass the spring season in Washington with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barrett, who have been spending the winter in Arizona. Miss Barbara Wright, daughter of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, recently returned from Europe, where she has been in school. Scarcely had she reestablished herself in town until she set out in search of a job. Forthwith she found it and is allied with one of the smart photographic studios, a position which seems to appeal to daughters of society.

Others included in the early list of debutantes are Miss Georgette Yerby, daughter of Mrs. Charles Bridges; Miss Harriet Anderson, daughter of Mrs. Chandler Anderson; Miss Moira Archbold, daughter of Mrs. Anne Archbold; Miss Louise Harrison Gwynn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Gwynn; Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Mitchell; Miss Olga Bayne, daughter of Mrs. Sidney Graves; Miss Mary Birdsall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gregg Birdsall; Miss Andree Cassels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cassels; Miss Virginia Flannery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Flannery; Miss Gertrude Faust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Faust; Miss Virginia Glazebrook, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Larkin White Glazebrook; Miss Florence Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, jr.; Miss Beatrice Cotton, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. George S. Cotton; Miss Helen Wardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wardman.

Wake up Rested!

Do you wake up with a smile—with nerves relaxed from hours of restful sleep? There is nothing like sound sleep for making one vitally alive. Nothing so saps the energy as restless, fitful slumber.

A mattress in constant use will flatten out. Gradually the hair or felt inside loses its springiness. No longer does it properly cushion the body's curves.

At little cost the buoyancy of an old mattress can be restored. Why not make this test today? Send a mattress to our factory, where it will be subjected to 230 degrees of heat in an electric oven. Any lurking germs will be destroyed.

Then the hair or felt will be taken out and cleaned—its springiness restored. The clean, sterile felt or hair is then put into attractive new ticking. After one night's sleep, you will pronounce it the most restful mattress you ever owned.

The work requires only one day and the cost is only $4 to $9. At the same time we make a new mattress of your old one, let us renovate your box springs and pillows, too.

BYRD'S SAILING SHIP WINS RACE TO TAHITI

Bark City of New York First to eRach Papeete Port on Homeward Trip.

EXPLORER AT ROTURUA

Dunedin, April 13 (A.P.).—Dispatches from Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's Antarctic expedition ships today disclosed that the bark City of New York had beaten the steamer Eleanor Bolling to Papeete, Tahati.

The bark left here nine days before the steamer, the crew of which believed they could overtake the sailing ship on the first stage of the homeward journey to New York. The City of New York was hove to midway between here and Papeete for three days during a gale, but sustained the faith of her captain expressed before sailing from Dunedin that the "old ice ship always gets there." The Eleanor Bolling is due at Papeete Monday.

From Papeete the ships together sail for Panama, where Admiral Byrd will board the City of New York for the final leg of the trip to New York City. They are expected to reach home about June 14.

Admiral Byrd is resting at Roturua, the site of a large meteorological station, where William Haianes, meteorologits of the Antarctic expedition, is conferring with meteorologists of other Antarctic expeditions. Haines proposes to issue a report on his observations when he arrives at Panama. Admiral Byrd will return here next Friday to spend a final week before sailing from Wellington for Panama.

Student Who Flunked Shoots Examiner Dead

Buenos Aires, April 13 (A.P.).—Infuriated by failure in his final examinations in medicine, a student named Robles, at Cordoba University today shot and critically wounded Dr. Antenor Tey, one of his examiners.

Officials said Robles was confident he had passed the examinations taken yesterday, and blamed Dr. Antenor Tey when he learned he had failed

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

UNDER the system now in vogue at the National, each one of the players has his or her big week. Thus, Mr Walter Gilbert, leading man of the National Theater Players, was given his great opportunity in "Brothers" and he went over like a house afire. This week, Miss Marion Wells, the beautiful young leading lady has her big week in Myron Fagan's intense comedy drama, "Nancy's Private Affair." So, we shall all journey to the National Theater tonight expecting to see Miss Wells at her best.

WHERE the National Theater Players have a monopoly this week, next Monday night they must share opening honors with George White's "Scandals," coming to Poli's for a week's engagement. This is the tenth edition of this popular musical revue. Frances White, one of the real gifted comediennes of the stage, is featured this year, along with this galaxy: Willie and Eugene Howard, Marietta, the Abbott dancers, Florence Robinson Mitchell and Durant, Evelyn Wilson, Jim Carty and the Elm City Four. As usual, there will be a chorus.

ANNOUNCEMENT that Walter Hampden is coming to town with three plays, "Hamlet," "Caponsachi," and "Richelieu," recalls the fact that a Washington girl, Miss Rose A. Palmer, stands part sponsor for one of these plays. "Which one?" asked the office boy the other day, hearing this assertion. "Let's see," mused a bystander, scratching his head, "Bulwer-Lytton wrote 'Caponsachi,' William Shakespeare wrote 'Richelieu,' so it must have been Miss Palmer who wrote 'Hamlet.'" The office boy nodded his head. "I saw that play once," he remarked, "and I'll say this for it, 'It takes a good man to know what it's all about.'"

FOUR play troupes seen on Broadway last Saturday night will be seen there tonight. They are, on the way out: Fritz Lieber and his Chicago Civic Shakespearean Company; "Deah Old England," a comedy from overseas that failed to click; Maurice Chevalier, who was backed by no less an attraction than the orchestra of Mr. Duke Ellington, and "Trokya," the play of Russian life, with the popular Zita Johann starred. It did not take on Broadway, there only since April 1.

PHILADELPHIA is getting ready for the thrill that comes once in a lifetime, a good performance of Aristophanes' masterpiece, "Lysistrata." It will be produced by a newcomer to the theatrical field, the Philadelphia Theater Association, on the evening of April 28, with Fay Bainter in the title role, assisted by a cast of some 73 players. A special adaptation of the play has been made by Gilbert Seldes, with settings designed by Norman-Bel Geddes. "Lysistrata" was produced in Washington last by the Moscow Art Players—a memorable performance.

GAYETY

"Take a Chance" proves that when Nat Fields took a chance on making Ina Thomas his featured woman he gained in this a girl with a voice as well as looks. Ina made the former heard to advantage yesterday and stopped the show.

Coleman and Goodman, Hebrew comics, gathered lots of laughter. "Tiny" Huff and Harry Ryan did some clever stepping, while popular Gaby Fields put over some vocal numbers. Marion Kenyon and Gene Arden, chorines, also won much applause.

"Take a Chance" is a show that ranks with Ryan's "Girls From the Follies." A trench scene and the prison scene excel.

Jimmy Lake has added to his amateur and auction nights another night full of thrills, on which he brings out the wrestlers. Thursday is the big night.

Portugal to Purchase Six Modern Gunboats

Lisbon, April 13 (A.P.).—The government today announced decision to purchase six gunboats of the latest type for coast defense. The vessels will be bought abroad.

The decision was said to be the first step toward equipment of the navy with modern units. The government hopes to accomplish this within a few years.

Roumanian Princess Ill.

Bucharest, Roumania, April 13 (A.P.).—Princess Helen, mother of King Michael, was suffering today from an attack of the grip, with moderate fever. Physicians said she was progressing favorably.

LEADER LIBERATED IN STUDENT STRIKE

Injunction and Other Legal Actions Near at Lincoln Memorial University.

EVICTION WRITS SERVED

Harrogate, Tenn., April 13 (A.P.).—The Lincoln Memorial University student strike swung from the campus toward the courts today as the first of an impending series of legal actions resulted in at least temporary freedom for Clay McCarroll, student leader accused of rioting and disturbance.

McCarroll's hearing was continued until next Saturday when he appeared before a magistrate at Tazewell. He remained under $1,500 bond while another senior student, Ernest Fields, Kingsport, Tenn., awaited hearing on similar charges Tuesday. They were arrested Saturday.

Meanwhile, university attorneys announced court action against discharged professors and the strikers who in turn revealed that they had retained counsel.

J. R. Ketron, Tazewell attorney and university trustee, said he would appear tomorrow morning before Chancellor J. H. Wallace, at Tazewell, to ask an injunction to restrain Profs. M. G. Miller and E. V. N. Diller, discharged by the school, and McCarroll from "interfering further with the student body in the way of agitating a strike."

Ketron also announced that eviction warrants had been served on Profs. Miller and Diller, who live in campus houses. These cases are to be heard next Saturday at Cumberland Gap.

The students faced by Acting President J. H. S. Morrison's notice that those who persist in striking may be suspended tomorrow, held a mass meeting this afternoon, closing the fifth day since the strike was called.

As outlined by leaders of the strike, their demands are:

"Investigation either by some educational association or by independent persons of reasons why the university is not accredited.

"Reorganization of the administration to eliminate conditions which the students charge amount to 'inefficiency and injustice' in the conduct of the school.

"Elimination of alleged conflict between faculty members and administrative officers in charge of finances."

Judge J. H. S. Morrison, acting president, denied that such conditions exist, and has asserted the school authorities are making every effort to have it accredited.

OPERA TICKET SALE IS CREATING RECORD

Capital Society Leaders Are Enthusiastic Over Visit of Metropolitan Cast.

SPECIAL PLANS ARE MADE

Never in the history of a musical event in Washington has an advance ticket sale, both in number of tickets sold and in the gross amount, been as large as for the appearance of the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Fox Theater, April 23, 24 and 25.

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, chairman of the association, and Mrs. Wilson-Greene, managing the event, are responsible for the statement that to assure an annual season the present engagement must be a financial success in every respect.

Over 600 trunks are necessary to transfer costumes and personal wardrobe of the company while it will require six baggage cars to transport the scenery and another three the electrical and property effects. Fifty additional stage hands will be employed locally to augment the crew of experts coming with the company.

Particular interest is being focused in the opening night when "La Boheme" will be sung with such world-famed artists as Beniamino Gigli, Paolo Ananian, Lucrezia Bori, Nannette Guilford and Lawrence Tibbett in the principal roles. By utilizing the mezzanine balcony of the theater for the special boxes the famed diamond horseshoe of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City will come into a reality in Washington.

SHOULD PROHIBITION SUCCEED?

PUBLIC opinion, after ten years of experience under the Eighteenth Amendment, is still unsettled as to the value of Prohibition. There are doubtful drys . . . wets who wonder . . . drys who wish to have their convictions upheld . . . wets who wish to be shown why their arguments and criticisms against Prohibition are not just. And all will receive a hearing.

Starting May 5 The Christian Science Monitor will give answer to both the wets and drys. In a series of twenty articles it will not only discuss the question, "Has Prohibition Succeeded?" but will go further and deal with the even more vital question, "Should Prohibition Succeed?" It will be the most compact and usable summary possible of the complete case for prohibition from every important aspect.

The articles will appear in twenty issues, starting May 5 and ending June 14. Subscriptions for this six weeks' period are offered for $1 (4s. 2d.).

Millions of Theatregoers Demand Real Music

MUSIC LOVERS everywhere are insisting that the inspiration and beauty of real art rendered by living musicians in the theatre be restored to them.

The Music Defense League, through which the American public are voicing their vehement protest against the elimination of real music from the theatre, is growing with astounding rapidity. The League has passed the two-million mark in less than three short months of effort. Votes in defense of national culture still pour in.

If you, too, would like to register your resentment against substitution of soulless, mechanical reproduction of music and the elimination of real music in motion picture theatres . . . if you would like to insist upon getting your money's worth in entertainment when you and your children attend the theatre, sign this coupon and mail it today.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

EIGHTEEN years ago tonight the world was stunned by a message—the first great disaster reported by wireless—that the Titanic had struck an iceberg. Seven hundred persons were rescued, but 1,600 were lost, among them Maj. Archie Butt, aid to President Taft, and F. D. Millet, artist, Washingtonians, whose memorial fountain stands in the rear of the White House Grounds.

In those days it was necessary for the Titanic radio operator, who went down with the ship, to transmit latitude and longitude to the rescue ships. Now if a rescue vessel is equipped with a radio compass, it may follow directly to the disabled boat as long as its transmitter sends out a signal.

Then a radio operator in New York, David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, now in Washington, insisted upon remaining on duty day and night until he had received a complete list of Titanic survivors, so that distracted relatives might be comforted.

Rumor has it that Frank H. Lovette, assistant secretary of the Radio Commission, met with refusal when he journeyed to the White House recently to seek aid in obtaining the commission secretaryship, for which there is a long string of applicants.

Lovette was informed, it is said, that the White House would have nothing more to do with Radio Commission appointments.

* * * *

THE question is asked how soon Col. Thad Brown, chief counsel of the commission, will make his debut in the District Court of Appeals. Two of the numerous appeals were heard there the other day, but Paul D. P. Spearman, assistant counsel, was obliged to argue both of them by himself, while his opponents had several attorneys, fresh for each case.

This despite the fact there are ten lawyers in the commission's legal division.

Supershowmanship was exhibited by Norman Baker, of Station KTNT, Muscatine, Ia., who the other night when mysteriously shot at, instead of notifying the police, called the Associated Press by long-distance at Chicago, and tuned the A. P. in on a first-hand account of the incident he was giving to listeners over his station.

Baker, who is a circus calliope manufacturer and runs a cancer hospital, because of his cancer cure broadcasts has aroused the ire of the American Medical Association, which has called him a "quack."

ANOTHER Washington church is to have country-wide attention when a concert of sacred music will be offered by the A Capella Chorus of the First Congregational Church over Columbia next Saturday night.

The date for the Pope's broadcasting a message to the world is set for June 29. Marconi is himself building the station.

Jesse Butcher, of New York, Columbia's efficient new publicity man in town Saturday, said that Washington, along with Chicago and San Francisco, would hereafter be a regional distribution point for Columbia news, instead of shipping it by freight from New York, as evidently had been done in the past.

AND speaking of publicity, read the following letter which Thomas R. Shipp, of our city, press representative for Atwater Kent, addressed to Editor and Publisher, the newspaper publication in New York:

"I note your suggestion that 'maybe it was old Tom Shipp' who induced the Census Bureau to ask everybody in the country if they had a radio set.

"I must disclaim that honor. In fact I never thought of it. If I had thought of it, of course, I wouldn't have suggested that the Census Bureau inquire about radio sets generally. I would have suggested that they ask, 'Have you an Atwater Kent?'

"I think you and I must agree that the fellow, whoever he was, that induced the Postoffice Department to put a Mazda Lamp on a postage stamp was some 'public relations counselor.' I'm not guilty."

Should the five Japanese girls here to thank the people for earthquake aid follow the example of the Japanese Ambassador when they face the Columbia microphone tomorrow morning they will give us some real Japanese in addition to whatever English they may be able to speak.

The ambassador speaks remarkably good English but his Japanese is far more exciting over the radio.

We waited in vain to hear an address by Dr. John A. Foote, president of the District Medical Association, announced by WOL for 6:45 p. m. Friday. No explanation was given by the station for the cancellation.

"IF the last R-K-O hour is the comments. "When a program average, it's pretty bad," Variety from the biggest vaudeville circuit now remaining in the world gives one hour on the air without a single laugh, something is wrong. We could only remark, at its conclusion: 'Isn't there a laugh left in vaudeville?'

"The announcer said, 'The next will be the most famous comedienne in America, Miss Fannie Brice.'

"And the 'most famous comedienne in America' sang two straight ballads. Never told a gag, never said anything funny; never spoke at all, besides not even singing a comedy song.

"An attempt at a giggle was tried by a man-and-woman talking sketch called 'April Fool.' The joke, if any, was on the listeners-in."

Dare Interprets the MODE

A dressy afternoon coat this season will be silk, and if it is black, it might be ermine-trimmed. (Courtesy of Blanche Lebouvier, Paris.)

Paris, April 13.

THE flare's the thing! Mary Nowitsky especially favors the flare in lounging and beach pyjamas, bathing suits and sport frocks.

Whether they be of linen, of shantung or of silk, the beach pyjama is gored to flare from a little below the knee down to the ankle with a touch of the pirate's flippancy about them. One very unusual and interesting beach pyjama of this designer's is made of a cotton cloth printed to resemble Persian shawls. Two "shawls" make one pyjama. These put together in such a way that they are smooth and tight over the hips, and one point of each shawl flares out above the ankle hem.

Hardly a bathing suit but has its oh, so brief shorts that flare almost from the waist or hips down to well—almost to the knee. I call them circular pants, for they look for all the world like two little circular skirts for dolls put on a grown-up lady and called bathing shorts.

Nor was the elegance of the lounging pyjama ever or anywhere more graciously executed. Chiffon frills, fine pleating of satin and gores of lace all result in flare pyjama pants. There is even one velvet pyjama with a veritable train gliding softly in the back—of each "pant" leg. It's quite the loveliest and most elegant pyjama suit I've seen!

Of course, we have all accepted the fact by now that tweed dresses simply must flare slightly from below the knee if not just above it, and that they depend for their flare upon subtle incrustation. If the tweed shirt becomes an ensemble with the aid of a matching cape, the cape, too, is ever so apt to follow the flare line of the skirt. Oh, these flares!

Gloves absolutely must accompany the summer afternoon chiffons and laces. These are not the same gloves, of course, that you wear indoors to tea, but are silk and linen and pique, and very often have linings or incrustations of printed silk to match the ensemble. While they are presumably to protect the hands, actually they are more of a whim than anything else. However, they are very much in keeping with the type of dresses with which they are worn.

Dolling up your kitchen—and yourself in it, that's what all good Daretetters are going to do this week—because we've made a most delightful leaflet chuck full of suggestions, helpful and original ones. Even if you aren't kitchen-ing these days, better send your stamped self-addressed envelope for the leaflet—it will do to put away until you are.

* * * *

Long or not so long—if you don't favor length in your afternoon coats, you will like this medium long one of Blanch Lebouvier's that I have sketched for you today. It is very dressy, of black bengaline with a collar of ermine, stitching at the natural waistline, and a very odd cuff effect. Nice?

* * * *

Then I just had to show you another Heim scarf and bag set. The scarf is threaded through a wooden buckle. Both the scarf and the bag are in three shades of brown, and the bag has a wooden flap handle which I know you will love.

* * * *

There are many items of interest, by the way, in the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Post each week.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

CHERRY JELLY.

(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

1 cup of cherry jelly.
1 to 1¼ cups of sugar.
4 tablespoons of lemon or apple pectin extract or 6 tablespoons orange pectin extract.

To prepare the juice, thoroughly wash the cherries and remove the stems and pits. Place in a saucepan, adding one-fourth cup of water for each pound of fruit. Heat to boiling and boil 10 minutes. Strain through four thicknesses of cheesecloth. Mix the juice with the remaining ingredients in the proportions indicated and cook until the jelly test is reached.

The best jelly is made from rather sour cherries of high flavor. It is clear and has a red color, and because of its tartness is especially suitable for serving with meat.

Deputies Vote to Shut Paris Gambling Houses

Paris, April 13 (A.P.).—The Chamber of Deputies today voted unanimously to abolish all gambling houses in Paris. The decision was made after Parliament had refused to ratify the Senate bill for reopening Enghien Casino, 5 miles from the city.

The casino had been closed since the war. The chamber's ruling today affects about 75 Paris clubs where bacarat, chemin de fer and trente et quarante are played.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

"I was given a primrose a few weeks ago. It has continued to grow most beautifully, now what next. Has the plant a future, or does it die when its present crop of flowers is over. My Jonsonnii lily is afflicted with mealy bug. What do you suggest to rid my plant of this pest? Can I grow an African violet in my garden in the summer? I would take it indoors before frost.

Mrs. W. H. G.

Your primrose, if properly cared for, will live almost indefinitely. It demands a great deal of water and a warm, sunny, well-ventilated location. Spray the plant once a week with cold, soapy water to prevent the appearance of mealy bugs. Give your lily the same treatment. Yes, you can plant African violets in the open when the weather permits. Be sure to keep them well watered at all times.

The leaf I am sending under separate cover is from a plant that was most beautiful one year ago. It resembles a rubber plant with red-edged leaves. In a short time after the plant arrived all the leaves had fallen off. In May I removed it from the original pot and planted it in a very large pot, placed it in the open air and gave it water every day. In the fall I brought it into the house, where it has been growing fairly well. Please tell me the name and care this plant requires to keep it in a state of health. LOUISE K.

Your plant is a dracenas terminalis. This variety requires a rather sunny location in some warm but well-ventilated place. In a room where the temperature remains about 68 degrees it should be given water three times a week.

Please tell me the name of the plant of which I am inclosing a leaf. The leaves were at one time as large as a man's hand and the flowers a brilliant scarlet. Since I brought it into the house it has not bloomed and now it is losing all its leaves. What treatment should I give the plant at this time to cause an improvement in its condition?

MRS. J. J. S.

Your plant is a begonia. Better at once cut it back to the root. Keep it in a well-ventilated place where it will have plenty of light but not much direct sun. Keep the soil quite moist at all times. It will soon begin to send forth new shoots, which should begin to bloom in early summer.

Will you please tell me what has caused the leaves of my entire plant to go as the one I am inclosing. I have only had the plant two weeks. I have given it the same care as all my other plants. This one is commencing to droop and the tips of all the leaves are yellow. I have removed six large leaves which have become completely withered. I keep it in a very warm room, but never near a radiator. IRINE S.

As you do not tell me the care you are giving your other plants I can not explain any mistakes you may be making in the care of this particular plant, which is a species of dracena. This variety should be provided with a light, fibrous soil with good drainage, liberal watering with frequent showering and, to insure the greatest development of coloring, should be given all the sunshine available.

I have a large aspidistra plant, the leaves of which are turning yellow. Each week I remove the driest of them. My begonia is in about the same condition. I have cut the begonia back and attempted to root the slips taken from the removed top growth. I have planted these slips in soil. Would it have been better to have rooted them in water?

F. E. C.

Better transplant your aspidistra, dividing the root into three pieces, planting each one in a separate pot. Begonia cuttings wil root in either soil or water.

"ARIES."

IF April 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 a. m. to 10:40 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m., and from 8:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 a. m. to 7:30 a. m., and from 5 p. m. to 6 p. m.

Astrological influences on this date are of a mild, but favorable character. The wheels of fortune, however, will not run on their own momentum, and individual and conscious effort is essential. There will be an inclination to leave things for a dim and distant "tomorrow."

The child born on this April 14 will be rather selfishly inclined and will be out for self. It must learn, through its play with other children, to give and take, and to accept defeat as well as success with equanimity. It will have a very active brain.

You do not possess a temperament which will insure you perpetual happiness or contentment of spirit, no matter what the gods have in store for you. It is easy for you to join the ranks of optimists, when pleasant things come your way; but how soon you desert them when the tides of fortune turn the other way! You do not have sufficient stamina to withstand stormy weather, and you have insufficient faith to glimpse the sunshine through the fogs of despair and uncertainty which, on occasion, surround every one. Your attitude of mind invites catastrophe. You meet your worries more than half way.

You are a very conventional person, and you never do anything which you think would ill become one of your status in life. You would never defy Madam Grundy for the sake of any wild desire. You are afraid to be very independent in either thought or action. You want a sheltered existence. You will never learn from first-hand experience what sort of a place the world is.

You have a kindly nature, and a most generous one. When you are not "in the dumps," you are most thoughtful and gracious, and are liked by one and all. In your work, it can be said that you pull your weight.

Father Slays Tiger Cat Which Killed His Child

Asuncion, Paraguay, April 13 (A.P.).—The newspaper El Diario today published a dispatch from Colon, in the Palomares district, describing a battle in which a laborer killed with a machette a large titger cat which had entered the man's home and slain his child.

The tiger cat is an American wildcat ranging from Mexico, on the east of Andes, to Paraguay and the central forest region of Argentina. It is considerably smaller than a jaguar.

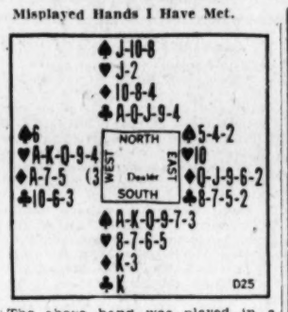
WORK ON BRIDGE

Misplayed Hands I Have Met.



The above hand was played in a multi-table game of Contract, South being the Declarer at all with a four-Spade contract. The bidding as a rule was: South, two Spades; West, three Hearts; North, four Spades, followed by three passes.

Had the hand been played at Auction, South probably would have obtained the Spade contract with a bid of three Spades.

In the play, all Wests led the King and then the Queen of Hearts, all Easts discarding the Deuce of Clubs to show Club weakness. West's lead to trick 3 varied; in some cases a third high Heart was selected with the hope that East could over-ruff North; in other cases the Ace of Diamonds was led to trick 3 and a small Diamond to trick 4.

When the former happened, North trumped after which it was very simple for the Declarer to make one trick more than game by exhausting the adverse trumps and discarding two Diamonds and one Heart on dummy's Clubs. When the Ace of Diamonds was led to trick 3, that ended the trick-taking of the adversaries, as closed hand's King of Diamonds became a winner and the rest of the play was a showdown for Declarer. So every South made game, regardless of the variation in West's lead at trick 3.

The Correct Play.

With the adversaries playing soundly, game should not have been made at any table. East should have realized when the Queen of Hearts was led that, although West, who was marked with the Ace, could win that and East could not over-ruff; consequently only two Heart tricks could be taken by East and West. It was not likely (in view of the bidding) that the adversaries would win a trump trick, and the dummy hand showed conclusively that the Declarer would take every Club trick. If game could be saved, it must be with the aid of the Diamonds; and the advantageous way to lead Diamonds was from the East hand, not from the West. So East should have trumped the second trick (which West otherwise was sure to win), and have led the Queen of Diamonds to trick 3. In this hand, that play would have saved game; in any event it could not have lost anything

SCIENCE PAINTS BRIGHT FUTURE FOR CHEMICAL INDUSTRY

Comeback of Chemical Stocks Due to Earnings

New Substances Obtained Through Research and Mass Production; Now Ranks Second in Industrial Groups; Efficiency High.

By IRVING FISHER
(Professor of Economics, Yale University).

There is a pro, and a vigorous con, as to the ethical aspect of our taking possession of the plants and patents of the chemical and dyestuff industries theretofore owned or controlled by German nationals in America.

Whatever may have been the justice or injustice of this action, it can be fairly said that the United States has supplied the best of its talent and brains to bringing this important industry further along a path of everwidening usefulness.

The chemical industry is destined to play a most important and an increasing part in the future growth and prosperity of the United States and of the whole world.

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., April 13.—There seems to be ample reason for the rapid recovery of stock prices in the chemical group, due to expectation of great future earnings in this field from applied science and inventions.

It is perhaps not generally known that the chemical industry in the United States, from the standpoint of assets, has grown in the last decade to the point where it holds second place among the groups of industrial corporations.

Probably income tax returns for 1929 will show over $14,000,000,000 of assets for this industry. Mr. E. M. Allen, president of the Mathieson Alkali Works, has estimated that sales of chemicals and allied substances by domestic producers in 1929 exceeded $10,000,000,000; that the value of products in the field of chemical and allied industries would reach $4,400,000,000 in 1930; that imports would reach $240,000,000, and that exports would be $230,000,000.

Probably in no industry has such a tremendous amount of money gone into research during the past ten years, nor have such tangible benefits accrued from proportionate investment elsewhere. Pure as well as applied science has contributed, and in the train of discoveries and adaptations made have come a multitude of benefits to industry and to agriculture.

Practical Benefits of Research.

Among them are the mechanical liquefaction of air and production of oxygen, nitrogen, argon, and other constituent gases therefrom; butanol and acetone, which are widely used in the manufacture of celluloids, lacquers, photographic films, patent leather, auto finishes, airplane waterproof "dope," glass and bronze articles, furniture and varnish making, oil refining, manufacture of dyes, drugs, artificial silk and textiles. These two invaluable chemicals, butanol and acetone, have come into general use during the past decade. It was butanol, in fact, which contributed largely to the mass production of motor cars, eliminating the necessity of large inventories of finished cars in paint shops, since it made possible a quick-drying lacquer which could be sprayed on with a "gun."

Molybdenum, vanadium, titanium, chromium, silicon—these names, or most of them, have come to mean much in industry and everyday life within only the short span of the post-war years. Their development has been rapid and widespread. Other smaller but nevertheless important applications of the fruits of research have been nitro-cellulose containers, which are transparent and resilient; sheets of the same material for display packaging on retail counters; pyroxalin lacquer, artificial leather, and various synthetic organic chemicals.

German Genius Contributes.

The beneficiaries of these developments are many and varied; they range from manufacturers of glass, ceramics, rayon, paint, paper, explosives, films and motor cars, to the farmer who benefits from improved cheaper synthetic fertilizer, and the manufacturers of perfumes.

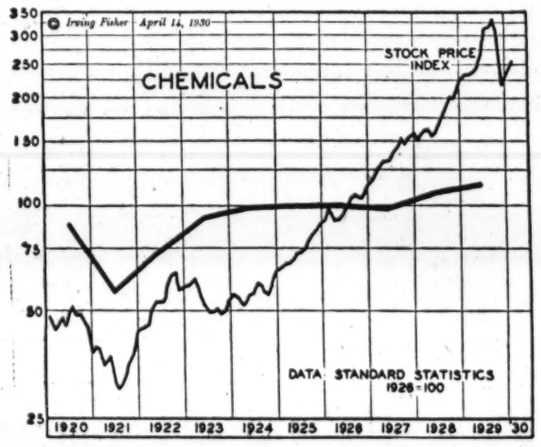
Many question the degree by which the United States benefited from the European war. There is a pro and a vigorous con as to the ethical aspect of our taking possession of the plants and patents of the chemical and dyestuff industries theretofore owned or controlled by German nationals in America.

But, whatever may have been the justice or injustice of this action, it can be fairly said that the United States has supplied the best of its talent and brains to bringing this important industry further along a path of everwidening usefulness. Meanwhile, the I. G. Farbenindustrie Corporation, a tremendous German undertaking, with 154,600 employes at the close of 1928, has been working under agreements with the DuPont interests and the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. It has given evidence of the recrudescence of Teutonic ingenuity and resourcefulness in such new departures as the production of oil from coal by the process of pumping hydrogen into it; the hydrogenation process whereby crack residue and heavy oils are treated to give a greater gasoline yield; the development of a drug which is a preventive of malaria and noninflammable film. From the close alliance with companies in this country has grown an American subsidiary, known as the I. G. Chemical Corporation. Some of its directors are Edsel Ford, W. C. Teagle, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; Charles E. Mitchell, of the National City Bank of New York, and Paul M. Warburg, of the International Acceptance Bank.

Underwriters Favor Chemicals.

Over a long period of years the American people has seen tremendous expansion first in one industrial group, then in another. From the Civil War until the turn of the century, the railroads had their greatest development. Then came steel. The automobile industry followed. Since the European war perhaps the rate of growth has been greatest in the spheres, respectively, of motor cars, aeroplane, power companies, and chemicals. Taking their cue from advances in applied science, powerful, far-sighted syndicates underwrite and develop each industry as it shows signs of going into its period of greatest growth.

At the December business survey conference at Washington sponsored by President Hoover, the new capital expenditure of the chemical industry for 1930 was expected to reach $360,000,000, of which $275,000,000 would be devoted to industrial chemical works. Regardless of tariff uncertainties, business recession and anti-trust scares, the industry goes forward, with the financial condition of most of the companies extremely sound and large cash balances which may be applied to further research without resort to flotation of great blocks of securities. The chemical industry is destined to play a most important and an increasing part in the future growth and prosperity of the United States and of the whole world.



Since 1921 chemical production has steadily increased, but the rise of chemical stock prices to new levels has been relatively greater. This is because the chemical industry is still capable of large future development, which the market discounts in higher prices.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—George A. Harder, chairman of the board of directors of the Universal Radiator Co., states that current business is running above the corresponding period of last year, and the outlook is extremely encouraging as a result of the recent expansion in building activities throughout the country.

Losses in 1929 due to robbery of freight while in transit on the railroads of this country and Canada were the smallest for any year since 1914, although the volume of traffic is now 57 per cent greater than it was fifteen years ago, the American Railway Association reports. Robbery losses last year amounted to $757,803, a reduction of $170,760, or 18.5 per cent, below 1928, and $11,969,144, or 94 per cent below the 1920 figure, in which year robber losses were the greatest for any one year in the history of the railroads.

A review of newspaper advertising in 1929, issued by the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, shows that the automotive industry spent the largest amount of any single group, 28 companies manufacturing cars and trucks having invested a total of $64,245,000. The total for the year, the bureau reported, was $260,000,000, a record figure. The report further showed the linage of some groups had increased from 25 to 28 per cent.

Irvington C. Bush, president of Bush Terminal Co., has been elected chairman of the board of the First Federal Banking Corporation, organized to promote international trade.

National Electric Corporation, of Pittsburgh and New York, today announced acquisition of the inca Manufacturing Corporation, of Fort Wayne, Ind., manufacturers of magnet wire.

It is the intention of National Electric, says the announcement, "to make the Inca Manufacturing Co. one of the largest manufacturers of magnet wire in the country. The plant at Fort Wayne is now in the process of being doubled in size and further large increases in capacity are contemplated."

Why "Undertaker" Failed.

The English equivalent for the French term "entrepreneur" was formerly used to describe the leading figure of a new enterprise, but the word fell into disuse because of certain associations. The word was "undertaker."

Convertible Bond Defined.

A convertible bond is a security, carrying a fixed return, which can be exchanged for stock of the company at some definite future date, thus gaining the privilege of speculative gains or losses.

COMMON STOCKS UPON NEW LEVEL

Rise Is Nearly Two-Thirds of Climb From 1926 to 1929 Peak.

TRADING RATIO SMALLER

By H. B. BROUGHAM
(Irving Fisher Service).

The level of common industrial stock prices rose last week to 165.6, representing an upward climb to nearly two-thirds of the rise of stocks from 1926 to the peak of September 7, 1929. It is only slightly below the picture drawn by Irving Fisher of the proper level of the new plateau of stock prices on which the crash took place. This level would be at about 175, on the basis of 1926, whereas the boom market of 1929 actually climbed to 210.

The present market has gone up with a constant increase in the ratio of stocks traded to total stocks outstanding. The increase is not comparable, however, with the floating supply of stocks during early September of 1929, which has been figured all the way up to 20 per cent of the total. No doubt the stock price level would go down considerably if the banks holding "frozen" stock collateral formerly on the market should begin feeding it out at an accelerated rate. Allowance for this factor of frozen credits might serve to justify a rise of stocks considerably above what it would be if the former proportion of the total stocks outstanding were being traded.

The gain of industrial stocks last week was 2 per cent, representing a rise of 35 per cent over the low on November 13, 1929; of this, 17 per cent has been realized since the week ended February 24. Of the 320 stocks in the Fisher selection 39 per cent went up last week, 33 per cent fell and 28 per cent showed no change over the preceding week's closing.

Tradings Reach New 1930 Peak.

Average daily value of tradings last week on the New York Stock Exchange for all stocks rose by 8 per cent over the preceding week, reaching $304,600,000—the high for this year, and the highest since the week of November 14, 1929. April 4 was the record day for 1930, and April 7 was only slightly below this level. Preferred stocks and rails showed slight declines last week, while utilities continued to rise.

Average daily value of tradings in common industrial stocks rose by 12 per cent to $231,400,000, with Monday the high day since November 7.

Nine groups were off in trading last week, eleven groups rose.

European Stocks Continue Rise.

Stock prices in London and Paris continue to show rising trends. A gain of 3.1 per cent in Paris stocks last week brings the level to 148.0, showing an increase of 7 per cent over the recent low of 137.8 on March 14.

London stock prices gained 1.4 per cent last week; at 99.6 they show an increase of 7.1 per cent over the recent low of 93.0 on March 7.

Berlin stock prices following the two weeks of March 28 and April 4, in which stocks made a net gain of 7.3 per cent, sagged last week, taking a loss of 0.9 per cent.

The index of 225 industrial common stocks shows what a substantially representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the list changing weekly. The last column of the table gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

Industrial Groups Advance.

The investment group of industrial stocks came to the foreground last week and advanced nearly 3 per cent, with Borden, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, General Electric, Standard Oils and Westinghouse Electric making conspicuous gains. This group has maintained a steady upward trend for seven consecutive weeks from February 24, at 175.0, to April 11, at 204.6, making a gain of 17 per cent.

The semiinvestment group rose 1.8 per cent last week, bringing its gain from February 24 to date to 11 per cent.

The speculative group has fluctuated, as might be expected. Last week its loss of 0.1 per cent shows a slackening pace, though from February 24 to date this group has gained 16 per cent.

Below are shown index numbers of prices of common industrials on the New York Stock Exchange, arranged in classes derived from Moody's ratings.

Ambassador Filipowicz Is Guest Speaker Over Columbia Chain.

Poland, the native land of Pulaski, Kosciuszko, Mme. Curie, Paderewski and Mme. Modjeska, was described yesterday afternoon over the Columbia broadcasting system by its Ambassador to the United States, Tytus Filipowicz.

After speaking of his reborn nation, sketching its troubled past and confidently predicting an era of greater prosperity in the future, Ambassador Filipowicz greeted, in the Polish language, the more than 3,500,000 people in the United States of Polish descent.

The diplomat, whose status was recently raised from minister to that of ambassador, while a similar honor was conferred on the American representative in Poland, was introduced to his audience by Senator Henry J. Allen, of Kansas.

Activity in Bonds Less; Prices Lower

The bond market showed less activity and lower prices last week, as was the case during the preceding two weeks. Of bonds traded on the New York Stock Exchange, average daily value last week was $13,000,000, a fall of only 2 per cent, compared to the 17 per cent drop of the preceding week.

There was a 0.2 per cent drop of the Fisher all-bond price index for the closing last week compared with preceding week's closing. Of the 70 bonds in the selection, 47 per cent showed a decline in this past week's closing, 33 per cent remained steady and 20 per cent increased.

Wales Is in Khartum After 400-Mile Flight

Khartum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, April 14 (A.P.).—The Prince of Wales arrived here this afternoon after a 400-mile flight from Malakal.

His party, traveling in a dozen airplanes, circled the city before landing.

Flying Duchess Reaches Assuit.

Cairo, Egypt, April 13 (A.P.).—The Duchess of Bedford, flying from England to Cape Town, accompanied by a pilot and a mechanic, arrived at Assuit this afternoon from Benghazi. She is leaving for Khartoum, upper Egypt, at dawn tomorrow.

Huguenot Society Observes Jubilee

332d Anniversary of Edict of Nantes Is Marked by Church Rites.

The 332nd anniversary of the promulgation of the Edict of Nantes, which gave the Huguenots religious freedom in France, was celebrated yesterday afternoon by the Washington Huguenot Society with a service at St. John's Church, Sixteenth street and Lafayette Square. Nearly 300 persons were present.

The principal address was made by the Rev. Charles L. Cahart, retired Episcopalian minister, of Chevy Chase. The Rev. Florian J. C. Vurpillot, chaplain of the society and vicar of the French congregation of St. John's, officiated.

The prayers of the service were recited in French, but the address was in English. A special offering was devoted to the endowment fund of the Paris Theological Seminary.

Overpopulation Dangerous.

Long before a real starvation point is reached, every increase of population beyond a certain amount results in an increased death rate. Overpopulation in India and China often brings about famine and plague.

SOUTHWEST WHEAT STILL DETERIORATES

Long Dryness Continues Unabated, Resulting in Damage to Stands.

COTTON NEEDS SHOWERS

The long-prevalent dryness of the Southwestern winter wheat areas was unabated last week, with resultant injury to stands in western and southeastern Kansas, and in Oklahoma. Spottiness is general there.

Further north rain would be beneficial, but is not so urgently needed. From Illinois and Indiana, also, come reports of deterioration, and spottiness prevails in the eastern Ohio Valley. Northwest conditions are fair to good.

Seeding of spring wheat continued in South Dakota, with preliminary work general elsewhere in the spring wheat area.

Corn seeding is well advanced for the season, from Arkansas, North Carolina and Tennessee south. Early planted corn is not germinating well in Oklahoma, and the soil is too dry for extended planting.

Cotton planting went forward last week in Texas, but more moisture and warmer nights would be beneficial. Drought conditions Oklahoma planting, but Mississippi Valley progress was good, likewise that in the Carolinas. Georgia and Alabama weather was too rainy for field work.

COMMODITY PRICE LEVEL RISE HOLDS

Index in Week Gains 0.6 Per Cent to Mark of 91.3 for Group.

DOLLAR IS BUYING LESS

The recent upward turn of commodity prices, following the long, distressing slump, was consolidated last week when the all-commodity price index rose 0.6 per cent further to a mark of 91.3. The rise the preceding week was 0.4 per cent, so that the index has gained 1 per cent in the space of two weeks. This is the highest point recorded since the week of February 28.

The newly acquired strength in farm products and finished foods was largely responsible for the sharp rise last week, as there were but 46 per cent more rises than falls, as compared with 80 per cent more rises than falls the preceding week.

The purchasing power of the dollar sagged to 109.6 last week, taking a loss of 0.5 per cent.

The raw materials and finished products divisions furnished the strength to keep the commodity price index moving upward. Of the individual items, those appearing in the agricultural group showed more gains than those in the nonagricultural category. The raw materials and finished products divisions gained 0.67 per cent and 0.65 per cent, respectively.

With lead and sugar taking the largest falls, the semimanufactured group reversed its step after three weeks of upward trend and went off 0.44 per cent last week.

Of the agricultural groups, hides, foods and farm products continued their rises last week. Potatoes, lambs, hogs, beef, wheat and cotton were responsible for the 1.05 per cent gain in farm products.

In the fuel and lighting group a conspicuous riser was gasoline (as sold in garages), going from 14.3 cents to 15.3 cents a gallon.

Major Clubs Confidently Ready

Optimism Rules With All Claiming Pennant Chance.

Champs of Last Year Confident of Winning Again.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

THE note of optimism rings louder and clearer than ever from all sides as major league baseball teams wait for the opening of the 1930 season, today in Washington and Tuesday around the rest of the circuits.

Despite several training injuries to some of the most famous stars, including Babe Ruth, and uncertainties here and there arising from other causes, there is hardly a team in either league which does not believe itself capable of making a real fight for the pennant or at least of finishing in the first division.

The two champions of 1929, the Philadelphia Athletics and the Chicago Cubs, are brimming over with confidence that they will repeat their triumphs. The world champion Athletics are standing pat on the line-up that carried them to victory last October. Manager Connie Mack has added a group of youngsters for reserves, but expects the same regulars to do most of the work.

Bell Strengthens Cub Infield.

Joe McCarthy, manager of the National League champions, has strengthened the one serious weakness in his line-up by acquiring Lester Bell to play third base, and, with the return to form of Leo Hartnett, the Cub catching department is much stronger.

Eight new managers in the two leagues have joined the hopeful chorus and most of them seem to have good reason for their optimism. The New York Yankees, under the guidance of Bob Shawkey, have added a pair of rookie sluggers to their line-up and now seem to have but one doubt. That concerns the probable or possible effects of Babe Ruth's now celebrated charley horse.

The Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns, with Donie Bush and Bill Killefer as the new holders of the guiding reins, both appear much stronger than last year, due principally to increased hitting power. The Cleveland Indians, likewise strong contenders in the American League race, are about "set" with the same team as last year.

Upsets Predicted in National.

The National League race looks very much as if it might produce a few upsets because off new strength added to the weaker clubs while most of the favorites are in early trouble. Philadelphia and Brooklyn both have served notice that they intend to be in the running. The Phillies, with a fine array of sluggers, no longer are in the habit of finishing in or near the cellar, while the Robins, with a better pitching staff than ever, have found a real infield now that Glenn Wright's arm is working and Jake Flowers has recovered from hampering illness.

Browns and Cards Stronger This Year

St. Louis, April 13 (A.P.).—The Cardinals will be relying upon improved pitching and the Browns hoping for better hitting when the two St. Louis major league entries take up the flat chases Tuesday.

Both clubs have new managers, each of whom moved up from a coaching job last season, Gabby Street piloting the Cardinals and Bill Killefer leading the Browns. Killefer has shown his club to be a wide-awake crew of smart ball players, strong on defense but weak on hitting in spring training. The Browns have a new right fielder in the slugging rookie, Ted Gullic, and Hale, third sacker obtained from Philadelphia, has strengthened the infield.

Street, who has much the same crew as last year, expects his pitchers to stage a comeback, aided by Flint Rhem and Al Grabowski. He has switched Frankie Frisch from second to third, putting Adams, formerly of Pittsburgh, at second. He will be forced to start with two outfielders, Orsatti and Peel, on the sick and injured list, but with Fisher, Martin, Watkins and Blades in reserve.

It is probable that Sylvester Johnson, one of the most promising of young Cardinal hurlers, will get the call for the opening game against the Chicago Cubs here, with Jimmy Wilson behind the bat. Killefer figures to start either Sam Gray or Alvin Crowder, stars of last year, on the mound against the Tigers at Detroit, with Rick Ferrell catching.

Peglerisms

Bars None at 180 Pounds.

"1033 Shannon avenue, Barberton, Ohio. Phone Barberton 0879.

"Representing Frankie Wine, sensational fighting blacksmith, who went to Johannesburg, South Africa, and twice beat Johnny Squires, the champion, in fifteen round battles, having Squires on the floor eight times in their first bout. Get the best men to fight him at 180 pounds and up, as he bars none. Has shown four times in Rochester, N. Y., in two months. A sure repeater any place he shows.

"Also representing Chick Burns, the San Antonio socker, ready for anything at 173 to 180 pounds and prefers Leo Lomsky, Jimmy Slattery or Lou Scozza. Burns had three straight wins in Johannesburg. Has knocked out Chief Metoquah, Soldier Buck, Jimmy Mahoney, Dago Joe Gans, and others. Fought Mr. Stribling three sensational battles and is ready for anything you can get him, Mr. Promoter.

"Also, K. O. Husk, age 23, Akron, Ohio, knockout king. Scored 31 knockouts in 42 fights. Beat Young Guido, Patsy Perroni, Billy Diahaw and others. Show this hard-hitting fellow to your fans, Mr. Promoter. They will like him. Ready for anything at 156-162.

Guarantees Fans A Run.

"Representing K. O. Kelly, colored welterweight champion, back from second trip to Porto Rico, where he had eight sensational wins. Prefers Jackie Fields, Gorilla Jones, or any one you can get for him. Mr. Promoter, if you are looking for some one to give your fans a real run for their money, show them Mr. Kelly and he will be one of your best drawing cards.

"Also Koli Kola, bantamweight and featherweight champion of Porto Rico. This lad scored 112 knockouts in 113 fights. The only man to go the limit with this demon was Wilbur Cohen, but only ring experience saved Cohen from a knockout as he was down for three long counts. Mr. Promoter, if you are looking for a punching fool to show your fans, here he is. You pick them; Koli Kola will sock them. A real sensation.

"Mr. Promoter, book any of these crowd-pleasers for your next card and you will want them right back. Will furnish you plenty of publicity, cuts, mats and pictures. All ready to go on a day's notice. Let's hear from you."

Communications of this kind tend to obscure the purpose of prize fighting, for Mr. Basco's private memoranda to the trade seem little concerned with the inculcation of chivalrous ideals in growing boys, the oft reiterated mission of the various prize-fight commissions and the wealthy uplifters. Mr. Basco appeals to the primitive in the prize-fight customer and his bulletins suggest a sordid purpose in such phrases as "a punching fool to show your fans" and "book these crowd-pleasers for your next card." One might think that pugilism were merely a money-making scheme.

Where do They Fight?

Quite strangely, I never hear of Mr. Basco's fighters who fight except in his professional communications to me, but perhaps there is some plot. One hears of boycotts in the ring and there must be some unworthy reason why Koli Kola remains obscure after 112 knockouts in 113 prize fights.

As I say, I have been receiving Mr.

PRESIDENT TO TOSS FIRST BALL WITH 25,000 CROWD EXPECTED; MARBERRY TO FACE MACFAYDEN

Cabinet Members and Other Dignitaries Will Attend.

Weather Only Hazard With Colorful Program Scheduled.

the opening-day pitching burden with the man who was the best of the team's hurlers last season. Marberry, of the burning speed ball and deep-dip delivery, is the choice to face the Red Sox and as his battery mate he will have the little man who has been the mainstay of the catching staffs since 1923.

The opening-day frills have been carefully arranged. There will be the band concert; the parade to the flag pole led by Secretary of War Hurley and President Griffith of the Nats; the unfurling of Old Glory to the breeze, if any; the tossing out of the first ball by the President.

But there comes a time when the truth will out. Some day an immortal baseball tome will deal with "debunking opening day." Probably the most popular misconception and most common fallacy of the opening-day game is the mythical "play ball!" of the chief umpire. In the big leagues, no umpire has ever really been heard to say "play ball!" If the umpire in chief deems it time to start the game, he will say to the athletes: "All right, let's go;" "Come on, get moving;" "Get in there," or some other equally as gruff and unceremonious command. But the immortalized "Play ball!" of story and song—never.

And another thing. President Hoover may toss out the first ball, but it has nothing to do with the ball game. The umpire in chief who is lucky enough to be assigned to the Washington game, catches the sphere from the presidential fling, usually after a heroic effort, and deposits it in his own pocket. It immediately becomes a memento of his career and never finds it way into the opening game or any other. A common, ordinary new ball taken from the home bat boy suffices to start the game.

The Nats will be out this afternoon to win their first opening day game since 1927. Last year, the Philadelphia Athletics dealt Washington an artistic defeat in the inaugural and in 1928 the despised Red Sox were the winners in the Washington debut.

North-South Tennis Tourney Starts Today

Pinehurst, N. C., April 13 (A.P.).—Tennis stars here for the twelfth annual North and South tennis tournament played practice rounds today under the eyes of F. Eugene Dixon, of Philadelphia, captain of the United States Davis Cup Team. The tournament will get under way tomorrow.

Dixon, who plans to remain here during the tournament, which will run throughout this week, said he was particularly interested in watching the performances of the younger candidates for the Davis Cup Team.

John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., is the defending titleholder in the men's singles. His challengers include Francis T. Hunter, the Davis Cup veteran; John H. Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., third in national ranking; George M. Lott, of Chicago, ranked fourth, and Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, Pa., ranked sixth. Van Ryn is ranked fifth.

Also entered are Wilmer Allison and Berkley Bell, both of Austin, Tex., ranked seventh and ninth, respectively, and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., ranked tenth.

3 New York Teams Ready for Openers

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—New York's three major league baseball clubs await the opening of the season in splendid physical condition, and with one exception "set" for the opening of the season. The Giants may do some last-minute tinkering in the outfield.

Of the three, Brooklyn seems to have shown the most improvement. With Glenn Wright's throwing arm in shape again, Jake Flowers playing second base as well as he ever did and Jim Elliott, big southpaw, who was a casualty last year, well again, the Robins promise to make serious trouble. Manager Robinson has an old and a young pitcher, Adolfo Luque and Ray Phelps, added to his staff, and a promising young catcher in Alfonso Lopez.

The Yankees open the season with two youngsters in the regular lineup, Ben Chapman at third base and Allan (Dusty) Cooke in left field. After slow starts both have picked up momentum as the time for the acid test approaches. Babe Ruth, in spite of an annoying charley horse, is ready to start another campaign for home runs. The Yankees may have to depend on last year's pitchers for the bulk of the work.

The Giants must experiment with a green youngster, Eddie Marshall, at the yawning hole at second base and a last-minute trade brought Walter Roettger from the Cardinals to play an outfield position. Manager McGraw expects several young pitchers will come through and that Larry Benton will regain his winning form, misplaced somewhere along the path last season.

Fog of Uncertainty Surrounding Pirates

Pittsburgh, April 13 (A.P.).—The Pittsburgh Pirates Tuesday start their 1930 cruise in quest of the National League pennant in a fog of uncertainty. The trade which sent Burleigh Grimes, spitball ace, to the Boston Braves; failure of Lloyd Waner, flashy outfielder, to regain his full strength after an appendicitis operation; the long absence of Pie Traynor, captain and brilliant third baseman, who has an ailing eye, are among the uncertainties.

The excellent condition of the remainder of the club, the slugging and speed it has shown throughout the training season, the evident strength and class of its reserve force, and the fact that it is getting first class pitching, is food for happier thought.

Meinie or Kremer probably will get the call for mound duty in the opener at Cincinnati, with Rolly Hemsley on the receiving end.

Nats, With Same Line-Up, rated Improved; Stars Ready.

Few New Faces Take Field for Boston; Powell Farmed.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

WHEN the Nationals and Boston Red Sox take the field this afternoon in the 1930 American League opener, two teams which have strengthened themselves by improving players already on their pay roll rather than by the addition of any so-called stars, will be seen in action. The only newcomer who may break into the Washington line-up is George Loepp, who is alternating in center with Sam West.

He only gets the call when southpaws are doing the alien pitching, and so will not likely see action today unless Danny MacFayden, the scheduled starting Sox pitcher, is removed in favor of a left-hander.

Otherwise, it will be the 1929 Washington Team in action, but with several big exceptions. Third Baseman Ossie Bluege is now at top form after having been handicapped by an ailing knee for several seasons, while Outfielder Goose Goslin is playing better than he has in many moons, both mechanically and in spirit. In addition, Manager Walter Johnson has his pitching staff trained to the minute, with Joe Cronin showing a better punch than in the past and Buddie Myer improving in leaps and bounds as a second sacker.

Add to these improvements the fact that the Nationals think that they are good and simply will not quit, fighting from the drop of the hat until the finish, and Washington fandom will see the same individuals in action today as were on hand last year, but molded into a baseball machine which is hitting on all cylinders.

Wagner in Debut As Manager.

Reports from the Boston camp describe Heinie Wagner, making his big league managerial debut, as having a team, which, in many respects, resembles the Nationals. The only change in the 1929 infield is the possible substitution of Narlesky for Rhyne, while Sweeney is giving Todt a run for his money as a first baseman. Regan and Reeves are back at second and third, respectively, and both are said to be playing better than ever before, with Reeves at last having learned to peg accurately.

The Sox have one new outfielder in Oliver, a youngster, who has been hitting the ball so hard and covering so much ground afield that he has won himself the center field berth. Scarrett and Barrett are still doing business in the other gardens.

The Sox always have been a hustling aggregation, especially at the start of the season before old "Joe Stump" has paid his annual visit, and, irrespective of how they or the Nationals fare in the coming race, fans who wend their way into the Griffith Stadium this afternoon are sure to see a hot battle, full of action, plus the color of an inaugural setting which always lists the day of the opening game as a red letter one.

Powell Farmed To Chattanooga.

Outfielder Alvin (Jake) Powell, the Takoma Tiger Bearcat, played his last 1930 game as a National yesterday, leaving last night for Chattanooga. This young flychaser, who came within an ace of jumping from the sandlots to the majors almost overnight, goes on option, and with the understanding that, in case the Lookouts do not use him regularly, he may be recalled.

Powell has shown such a punch with the bat that Manager Johnson has tabbed him as a great future prospect and the provision that he play regularly with the Lookouts was insisted upon in the hope that he might get the experience he needs this season and come back to the Nats late next fall with a real chance or earning himself a berth here.

Pitcher Ed Wineapple and Outfielder Buck Freeman, whom the Nats sent to Chattanooga this spring, failed to make the grade there and have been returned. Wineapple immediately was Wright's Throw Sends Tying and Winning Runs Across.

NEW YORK, April 13 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees ended their preseason exhibition schedule today by beating the Brooklyn Robins, 8 to 5, to gain an even break in the two-game series, before 30,000 fans.

The Robins did more hitting, but the Yankees were more successful in bunching their blows and were aided by three Brooklyn errors.

Fayoum, 55 to 1, Wins French Juigne Stakes

Longchamp, France, April 13 (A.P.). Fayoum, owned by the Belgian liquor king, Jaques Wittouck, captured the Juigne Stakes, first real test for 3-year-olds of the 1930 crop, today, and paid the odds of 55 to 1.

Rated off the early pace by the English jockey, William Scanlan, Fayoum, son of Condover out of Lojinka, opened up with a tremendous burst of speed 100 yards from home, to win the $5,000 stakes by two lengths from Alcyon. Letourbillon was third. The race was over 1¼-mile course.

Del Ray A. C. started the season with a 12 to 8 victory over the Indian Head Cardinals today in a free-hitting, loose-fielding contest.

NATS DEFEAT ROCHESTER CLUB, 7-5

Cronin Leads Attack As Nats Rally for 11th Straight.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

IN bringing their exhibition season to an end yesterday, in which their 7 to 5 victory over the 1929 International League champions, the Rochester Club, marked their eleventh straight victory and gave them a record of seventeen victories as against but two defeats, the Nationals showed a gallery of about 2,000 that they are anything but quitters.

Starting off with a rush, they jumped into an early lead only to see it wiped out by a Redwing challenge in the eighth. Instead of taking the "Oh, well, it's all in a day's work" attitude, this alien rally simply acted as a "go" signal the Nats coming in from the field and immediately going out and getting themselves some more runs. The big blow of this frame was Joe Cronin's home-run clout, a drive into the left-field stands which would have been a "Ruther" in any park in the league.

Irving Hadley and "Chief" Carlos Moore did the home flinging. They yielded fifteen hits between them and were always in hot water, but received plenty of help from mates afield, two double plays coming in particularly handy.

Hadley Shows Reserve Strength.

Although he allowed six hits in five frames, Hadley's work was better than the cold statistics would indicate, as he always had a little reserve strength to call on and helped himself out of the tough going on one or two occasions, especially in the fourth, when, with men on second and first and none out, he fanned two and forced the other to loft to Powell. A double-theft had advanced this pair a base each as the first strike-out victim was listed.

One of the alien runs was charged to Hadley, however, a single, walk, wild pitch and Southworth's timely one-shot doing this damage in the fifth. Moore took up the burden in

Navy Lucky Omen Returned to Campus

Baltimore, April 13 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Tecumseh in bronze instead of wood, the old good-luck Indian chief for Uncle Sam's Middies, has returned to his stand on the Naval Academy grounds at Annapolis, but too late, say some of the young athletes, to assure victory in early season games.

Tecumseh for many years has been the god of 2.5, the passing grade at the Naval Academy. Pennies tossed at the foot of his pedestal are sure to bring luck, so the Middies say.

The image has been away since last summer getting his face lifted and being done over in bronze.

He was once the figurehead of the U. S. S. Delaware which was sunk about the middle of the last century. The ship was later raised and the image sent to the Naval Academy.

Difficult examinations meant nothing for the Middies if they offered Tecumseh a sacrifice before going into the classroom, it is said.

Last week, just before the statue was returned to its location, the Middies lost the first lacrosse game on the home field since 1924.

Pre-Easter Schedule Keeps Generals Busy

Special to The Washington Post.

Lexington, Va., April 13.—Washington and Lee will indulge in seven pre-Easter sport meetings beginning Monday and ending Saturday. To make up for a washout at North Carolina on April 3, the Generals will meet the baseball team from the University of North Carolina in a double-header here Monday. The first game will start at 2:30 o'clock and, by agreement between the two coaches, each game will run seven innings.

On Wednesday the University of Virginia Varsity Baseball Team will come to Lexington for a game, and Friday and Saturday the Washington and Lee yearlings will meet Petersburg High and Oak Hill Institute, respectively, on the diamond.

Saturday will also witness a twin bill track meet here with the University of Richmond Varsity and Freshmen. The Washington and Lee Tennis Team will play its second series of intercollegiate matches against the University of Virginia racqueters at Charlottesville Friday.

U. S. and Britain to Launch Yacht Cup Contenders Today

BRISTOL, R. I., April 13 (A.P.).—While Uncle Sam is launching a defender, John Bull will launch a challenger for the famous America's cup, emblematic of yachting supremacy, tomorrow, weather permitting.

At Gosport, England, Sir Thomas Lipton's latest challenger, the Shamrock V, is scheduled to slide down the ways.

Here at Bristol, the Enterprise, the first of the four prospective defenders of the famous cup, will slip into the water at the Herreshoff yard. The Enterprise is the smallest of the four, and smaller than Sir Thomas' Shamrock V.

W. Starling Burgess designed the Enterprise for a New York syndicate consisting of Harold S. Vanderbilt, Winthrop W. Aldrich, Vincent Astor, George F. Baker, E. W. Clark, Floyd L. Carlisle and George Whitney. Her amateur afterguard, Vanderbilt, Aldrich, C. H. Hoyt, C. F. Havemeyer, and Burgess, the navigator, have wide reputations in yachting circles.

The Enterprise is named for "The Lucky Little Enterprise," a navy schooner which won renown a century ago against the Barbary pirates. Her dimensions are: Length over all 120 feet 9 inches; water line 80 feet; beam 21 feet 8 inches; displacement 128.5 tons, and sail area 7,583 square feet. Her professional sailing master will be Capt. George H. Monsell, of Greenport, N. Y.

The dimensions of the Shamrock V show her to be slightly larger though slimmer than the Enterprise. The Shamrock V is 119 feet 10¼ inches over all, 81 feet 1¼ inches water line, 19 feet 7½ inches beam, displacement 134 tons and sail area 7,600 square feet. Capt. Edward Head, famed Bright Linksea skipper, has been selected by Sir Thomas Lipton to sail his challenger in the big race off Newport, September 13.

The other prospective American defenders, all larger than the Enterprise and the Shamrock V, are the Weetamoe, now building in the Herreshoff Yard and the Whirlwind and Yankee, nearing completion in the Lawley Yard at Boston. A series of elimination races this summer will determine which shall meet the Shamrock V.

RICH STAKES AWAIT RACING AT HAVRE DE GRACE

12-Day Meet Will Open Today

$10,000 Harford on Wednesday First of Big Purses.

Robertson Rode Ten Winners to Lead Bowie Jockeys.

By J. B. SNODGRASS
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 13. Maryland racing shifts tomorrow to Havre de Grace for twelve days. A week hence the New York circuit will start at Jamaica, and two weeks from now Pimlico will open with the running of the Dixie, and this meeting will lead up to the Preakness, the Kentucky Derby coming later, on May 17, bringing the racing season squarely up to the classics in short order.

The Preakness and the Derby are open races, and growing more so, the future books offering as high as 12 to 1 on any Derby candidate, with much activity. Churchill Downs has notified the public that it has no connection with any of the so-called "Derby Sweeps," or any other wagering, and that those who invest in sweeps do so at their peril.

Havre de Grace will have four $10,000 stakes, the first being on Wednesday, the Harford Handicap. The other large stakes are the Aberdeen, the Philadelphia Handicap and the Chesapeake.

Havre has filled up with Bowie horses and those from other points. New thoroughbreds will be introduced to the sport, and several good ones will be uncovered. The Greentree, the Glen Riddle, the G. D. Widener, some H. P. Whitney topnotchers and the Fair Stable are among those who will start some of their best, including some of the new crop of Man o' War offspring.

Robertson Topped Bowie Riders.

Judging by the big way in which the Maryland season started at Bowie, the Havre de Grace season is expected to increase the interest. It is more accessible by rail, and special train service from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York will be sufficient to accommodate all who desire to attend.

Alfred Robertson, under contract to Harry Payne Whitney, was the leading rider at Bowie. He piloted ten winners in the eleven days. He rode four winners in one day. Workman and Quackenbush each had five winners, being tied for runner up. Cimerak rode four winners, Carlisle four; Fermin and Renick four each, and those riding two winners each were: Steffen, Barnes, Schaefer, Thurber, Quillen, Watters, Kelsay, Ponce, Harvey, Ellsworth, Morrison and Leblanc.

Bowie was honored on four days by the presence of Vice President Charles Curtis and on Saturday by Governor A. W. Ritchie of Maryland. This was the first visit to Bowie by the governor, although he frequently attends the Pimlico meeting.

Vice President Recalls Jockey Days.

The Vice President Saturday afternoon recalled the days in Kansas when he was a jockey. He said he would never forget a horse named Tilden, which he rode for two years in the early seventies, at distances from a quarter of a mile to three-quarters. Mr. Curtis won something like 50 races on Tilden. Once he rode a horse named Brown Betts against Tilden and defeated the champion.

Bowie had the largest crowd Saturday in the history of 14½ years of racing there, when more than 25,000 people crowded in the inclosure. The winning of the Prince Georges Handicap by the Maryland filly, Dinah Did Upset, by a short nose from Sandy Ford was one of the closest and most thrilling races ever seen at this track. The pair ran the 1 1-16 miles almost head and head.

Joseph Farrell demonstrated that he knows how to run a race track. This was his first term as general manager, although he served unofficially as manager last year.

—Havre De Grace Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 14. Edward Burke, general manager, will welcome his fiends and the racing public in general to Havre de Grace this afternoon, for the opening of the spring racing season of twelve days, which will begin at 2:30 p. m. Those who go to the track on Chesapeake Bay will find many improvements in the stands. James Ross, superintendent, has the excellent track in the best condition FEATURE RACE—A good card is offered for the opening day, consisting of seven races, featured by the Tip Top Purse, at 6 furlongs. M. Stern's GUN ROYAL and the Brandon Stable's STAND BY will be favored in the field. Both have raced well during the winter, and for the present, it seems that the "winter horses" hold the edge over those that have not raced since last year. GUN ROYAL, in his last start, was beaten a length by the fast Pennant Lass, and was backed to 13 to 10. At Miami he beat Rapid Transit. He is in good condition, takes off much weight and should win this purse in fast time. STAND BY has not been out of the money in the last nine starts, and has won four of these races, beating Genuine at Bowie, NED O., which is being pointed for the Derby, and which won seven races as a 2-year-old, is not expected this early to be in top form, but probably has enough class to beat the others.

FIRST RACE—The largest field on the card is in the opening dash for 2-year-olds, on which there is even little winter form, for only a few of the field have ever started. There are some richly bred juveniles, some of which have worked fast, others that have not been seen in any kind of action. Two of these belong to Harry Payne Whitney, and have been brought down from the Brookfield Farm in New Jersey. They are the home-bred TOTEM, by the veteran Broomstick, and PENNATE, by Pennant—Pageant. This entry is selected to win on reports of their quality that have leaked out from Red Bank. Admiral Grayson will start the colt UP, by High Cloud, and he ran third to his running mate, Sweep All, which won the first race on the first day at Bowie. He is coupled with ABDUCTION. UP, should be the contender. E. B. McLean starts BOY MESSENGER for the first time, and the son of Messenger is said to be fast. J. P. Jones will saddle PRINCIPIO, by Princeps II, and he is said to be a good one. JIMMY JINGLE, by Jim Gaffney, is John Speed Elliott's contribution to the field. George D. Widener will be represented by JAMISON, gelded son of St. James. There will be plenty of speed and probably keen contention in this race.

SECOND RACE—This is a sprint over the 6-furlong course for 3-year-olds and up. Miss Blanche Watson's FIRST MISSION is picked for winner. All he will have to do will be to run back to his best winter race, when he beat Arcturus. He will not be the favorite, for GENUINE or ALGOL will hold that honor. GENUINE is regarded the contender, with ALGOL third. ALGOL beat FIRST MISSION two lengths at Bowie, but the latter is expected to improve by that race, and the shift in weights favors the New Orleans horse.

THIRD RACE—The Harwood Purse is an allowance affair in which FLIMSY is expected to show a great deal of speed in her first start of the year. As a 2-year-old she beat some good ones, such as Conclave and Snooze, and gets in with 102 pounds. NED O., discussed in the feature, with top impost, is expected to show a flash of speed if he starts in this race instead of the feature. He may be second, as he has been working well. He has not been rushed in any of his gallops. CHLO BOY, best on a slow track, should be third.

FIFTH RACE—FAIRY MAIDEN, which beat CLEAR SKY at Bowie easily on April 9, should repeat in the fifth race, as both horses are in this number, similarly weighted, and at the same distance on the same kind of track. MOSTOW, which formerly ran as Lord Braedalbane, should get the show money.

SIXTH RACE—CUDGELLER has been improving and is expected to show the way. He was beaten a head by Yosan the other day, and always has shown a liking for the Havre de Grace track. DANGER SIGNAL and ROCK SLIDE will be close contenders, and either of the three has a chance. In this class, horses beat one another.

SEVENTH RACE—BLAZING CINCH will have DUBLIN SHOW to beat in the seventh race, but on recent showing, can do so. He was in the money twice in three Bowie starts. DUBLIN SHOW has had only one race this year. FAIR GOLD is rated the other contender.

BOOM IS SEEN IN COLLEGE BASEBALL

Georgetown, C. U., Maryland Teams Drawing Cards.

By MIKE KELLEY
(Eastern High School Coach).

INTEREST in college baseball locally certainly has picked up this season to a degree unexpected by those in close touch with the trend of this sport in recent years. While popular opinion existed, that the star of college baseball had set, the successful seasons now being enjoyed by Georgetown, Maryland and Catholic University, of the local group, are bearing fruit at the gate, as demonstrated by the attendance of 1,500 at the Harvard-Georgetown game recently, a crowd far in excess of those seen around Washington for college games in many seasons.

One might believe this to be due to the victorious campaign the Hilltoppers are waging, and, while there may be grounds for this belief, still Georgetown has always had good ball teams, the poor team being the exception rather than the general thing, and still the sport was a loser at the gate. If it means a return to favor with the public, it will be a good thing for baseball in general and college baseball in particular, for this sport could be brought back to its old level by means of some encouragement on the part of college athletic authorities.

Holy Cross Showed Deficit Last Season.

It will be interesting this season to learn the fate of one of the leaders in college baseball over a long span of years, Holy Cross, up in Massachusetts. Last year this college suffered a deficit in its receipts from baseball, and such a happening was so rare that it couldn't be accounted for. For many years at that school the receipts from baseball carried the other sports along, even football being a creditor of the diamond activity, and, so popular was baseball of the college brand in Worcester, that the professional league with a franchise in that city was forced to give it up from lack of partonage.

Until the college baseball season was over in June, the professional owners were forced to play before slim audiences on Saturday afternoons, while college games drew from 10,000 to 15,000 people. When the annual series with Boston College was on, Fitton Field, the scene of these games in Worcester, was jammed with crowds of 20,000 and over, for some years. This was college baseball at its height.

Cause of Lack of Interest Hard to Explain.

Last season's result must be due to one or two things. Either followers of the sport had turned their attention to other interests, such as golf, or the caliber of the opposition had fallen so much as to make winning on the part of the home team too much of a sure thing, for Holy Cross teams under Jack Barry certainly kept pace with their predecessors and in fact reached new heights in their play.

The situation at Holy Cross seems to offer a good line on the rise or fall of interest in college baseball. Should a repetition of last year's decline in interest occur this year, one might be inclind to read the handwriting on the wall with some degree of accuracy, as it applies to the collegiate game.

Little Action for College Teams This Week at Home

A COMPARATIVELY lean week's program in college sports here opens this afternoon in a tennis match between George Washington and Maryland on the Edgemoor Club courts, starting at 2 o'clock. On every day excepting Wednesday there will be action of some sort for consumption of local fans, while on Wednesday and Thursday Georgetown's baseball team will perform in Philadelphia, but, comparatively, the program lacks quantity.

Chief interest in college sports seems to be centered on baseball this spring and the three local games scheduled this week should be well patronized. Georgetown swings into action tomorrow, meeting Bucknell at Washington Barracks, while Catholic U. will entertain the Lewisburg outfit on Thursday at Brookland Stadium. In the third game, on Friday, Maryland will engage Virginia Poly at College Park.

Today's match is calculated to bring out some spirited and brilliant tennis, although George Washington, boasting a star line-up, is strongly favored to win. The Marylanders, however, are not expected to drop any points without stubborn resistance, as a defeat at the hands of a G. W. team doesn't set well with Old Line athletes in any sport. There is a warm rivalry between these institutions that needs only the expansion of relations between them to produce competition of tremendous interest to local fans.

Considine Leads Colonials.

Heading the stellar Colonial cast is Bob Considine, coholder of the national public parks championship. Supporting him are several veterans, including Larry Phillips and Alan Staubly, both of whom made impressive showings in Capital club and municipal tournaments last summer.

Louis Kurland, a Baltimorean, is the outstanding Old Line player, but his presence today is doubtful as he is engaged in scholastic work that keeps him from taking trips. Maurice Murphy and Dick Cochran, both formerly of Western High School, are also members of the Maryland squad.

Georgetown's baseball team will be shooting for its tenth straight victory in the Bucknell game tomorrow, and if successful will equal the total number of victories made by the Hilltop Nine last year.

Bill Lomax, who has three wins to his credit thus far in as many games, probably will get the pitching assignment. A repetition of his previous work ought to pull Georgetown through. It is assuming that Bucknell is an average college team. Lomax has proven his ability to beat the average.

Catholic U. Faces Bucknell.

Catholic's game with Bucknell offers the Brookland Team a chance to atone for its thorough lacing received from Harvard last Friday, and the Cardinals doubtless will be out there fighting tooth and nail. They're the type that refuse to be shaken by adversity, as earlier events have shown this season. The fact that the Harvard loss was their first and the one that snapped a four-game winning sweak—something no C. U. baseball team has compiled in two or three years—should help to spur them on.

Lou Hurley, who was blasted from the mound by Harvard after two previous winning efforts, will face Bucknell. The rest of the C. U. line-up probably will be unchanged.

Maryland will seek to keep ahead of the .500 mark in the Tri-State League standings in its battle with Virginia Poly on Friday. So far, the Old Line has defeated Virginia, split even in two games with North Carolina U. and tied N. C. State. "Black Jack" Batson, winner in his only two starts to date, will likely be the Maryland pitching choice.

Takoma Tigers Open Season With Victory

The Takoma Tigers, Montgomery County champions, opened their season yesterday with a 14-to-1 victory over the Majestic Radion Seniors on the Silver Spring diamond. The victors gathered seventeen hits off three Majestic hurlers, and clinched the decision in the first frame with five runs.

given a ticket for New Haven, where he will toil this season under option. President Griffith expects to place Freeman later, but has made no arrangements as yet.

Umpire Aids Nats' Rookie Pitchers.

Umpire Roy Van Grafian, who has been officiating for the third straight season with the Nats on the spring trips, remains here to help Tommy Connolly and Bill McGowan start the Nats off today.

Van Grafian, who undoubtedly is one of the best guessers in the Barnard circuit, has proved himself particularly useful in breaking in Johnson's pitchers to the rule which will be strictly enforced this season. This makes it necessary for a balk to be called if the fingers fail to come to a complete stop in their motion while runners are on the bases. Four of these balks were called on the St. Louis moundsmen in their opening game last year, and it is a safe bet that, thanks to Van's efforts, none of the Nat boxmen will be so penalized this year.

A comparative showing of the Nats' doings in their nineteen-game exhibition schedule, completed yesterday, shows why the team lost but two games—and both of these by but a one-run margin. Johnson's team outscored its collective opponents, 117-51, outhit them, 180-133, and undererrored them by better than 1 to 3, 11-34.

FIGHT MANAGERS INTEREST PEGLER

Basco's trade bulletins for several years, always couched in the same ecstatic enthusiasm. New members join on and old members pass on from the Barberton, O., stable of fighters who fight, but the regiment is always up to strength and Col. J. R. Basco always is proud of his men.

Where they fight I do not accurately know, but if I were minded to become a fictioner specializing in prize fight stories, I should cut loose from the region of Madison Square Garden and the company of the millionaire patrons and join up as a swab to swing the towels and tote the buckets for J. R. Basco's boys on their meanderings to the little fight clubs way up the branch lines of the railroads, where the patrons chew tobacco and the rings aren't hemmed with plush but with common half-inch lynching rope with the whiskers on it. There I would find the prizze fight business still in its natural state, low and comic and unrefined.

NATS WIN, 7-5, FROM ROCHESTER

the next frame, went through it without granting any runs, thanks to a snappy double play by the Myer-Cronin-Judge combination, and then granted one or more runs in the remaining three frames.

The Redwings molded a marker in the seventh from Pinch-Hitter Wilson's triple and Brown's single and then used successive singles by Lucan, Pepper and Delker, a helpful out, and Smith's one-baser to knot the count at 4-all in the eighth. The run scored in the final came from singles by Toporcer and Collins and Lucas' out, on which Myer made a brilliant stop for a force-play at second.

Nats Start at Fast Clip.

Washington scored three of its runs in the first two frames. With two out in the opener, Goslin walked, stole second and carried on to third on Collins' poor peg to stop him and scored on Cronin's single after Myer, too, had stroled. Ruel's single and West's triple, on which the latter scored when Catcher Florence, former Georgetowner, missed Toporcer's fast relay home, gave the Nats their pair in the second.

Tex Carleton, who started pitching for Rochester, escaped trouble in the next frame and gave way to Larry Irvin, who held the Nats in check with his southpaw slants during this three-frame shift. Ira Smith did the allen flinging in the next two rounds, and was ineffective. Brown's error, followed by a walk and Goslin's single, was responsible for the run scored on him in the seventh, but the Nats' winning rally in the next frame was a real one.

Cronin hit the first ball pitched for his homer and, after Judge had rolled out, Bluege, Ruel and Tate singled in rapid succession. These, coupled with Delker's error and a walk, gave the Nats more than enough runs to win.

In addition to his homer, Cronin also cracked out two lusty singles for the day's sticking honors, with Goslin getting two singles. Practically every Rochester player had a part in the Redwings' attack.

Thompson Is Named Nats' Official Scorer

The American League is trying an experiment this season, naming an official scorer in each city in the circuit, who will be paid by the league, the idea being to make the scoring more uniform than it has been in the past with the baseball writers taking turns calling the plays.

Denman Thompson, sports editor of the Star, has been designated as official scorer for Washington this season, with Frank H. Young, of The Post, and John B. Keller, of the Star, first and second alternates, respectively.

Kickers' Golf Event Opens Argyle Season

The Argyle Club opened the golfing season yesterday with a kickers' handicap, the lucky numbers, drawn out of a hat, being 79, 72 and 75. The prize winners were: E. R. Greenslet, 99—20—79; Maj. H. K. Bentley, 103—24—79; William P. Di-Este, 77—5—72; John N. Baldwin, 84—12—72; B. G. Corson, 98—26—72; George Hamilton, 101—26—75. It was announced before the event that the lucky numbers would be between 70 and 80, inclusive, but J. Grant, 93—25—68, and E. Y. Henderson, 94—30—64, played their rounds with greater skill than they had anticipated and thus found themselves outside the breastworks.

Stevinson-McCallum Beaten by Golf Pros

A four-ball match was played yesterday on the course of the Belle-haven Club, near Alexandria, in which Miller B. Stevinson, District amateur champion, and Walter E. McCallum were paired against J. Monro Hunter and George Diffenbaugh, professional and assistant professional at the Indian Spring Club. The latter were winners, 4 up and 3 to play, repeating their victory of last autumn.

Circle Golf Prizes To Pralle and Hill

The initial event of the season at the Indian Spring Club yesterday consisted of an 18-hole medal play handicap allowance competition and a "circle" tournament. Circles were drawn on thirteen fairways at various distances from the tee but only two of the 60-odd contestants managed to land their drives within the designated space. These winners were George A. Pralle, who drove into the circle on the fifteenth hole, a distance of 260 yards, and Lawrence Hill, whose ball stopped in the circle on the thirteenth hole.

Former Gov. E. F. Morrow, of Kentucky, was the winner of the first prize in the handicap event with a card of 92—23—69. Dr. A. Thomas Utz, 95—24—71, was runner-up. There was a quadruple tie for third prize, as follows: Dr. L. S. O'Tell, 77—5—72; G. A. Pralle, 90—18—72; George J. Richardson, 95—23—72; H. Kidwell, 99—27—72.

Strauss Golf Victor In Woodmont Event

The second sweepstakes of the season played on the course of the Woodmont Club yesterday resulted as follows: Class A—F. W. Strauss, 95—30—65, winner; Phillip Reiskin, 97—29—68, runner-up. Class B—Henry Breslau, 95—35—60, winner; Simon Nye, 111—35—76, runner-up. The leading scores in Class A were as follows: David Stern, 99—30—69; Ralph Goldsmith, 89—19—70; William G. Ilich, 87—13—74; Albert E. Steinem, 92—18—74; Morris Simon, 92—18—74; Maurice Eiseman, 92—18—74; Howard Nordlinger, 84—9—75; Herman Shapiro, 104—29—75; Gilbert Hahn, 95—18—77; Max Meyl, 87—9—78.

The Takoma Tiger Juniors, who plan to enter the Capital City League junior class this year, will drill today at 5 o'clock on the Silver Spring High School diamond.

The Tiger Juniors are sponsored by the Takoma Tiger Unlimiteds, and hope to add to the already high laurels won by their older clubmates.

GRAYS WIN OPENER.

The Chevy Chase Grays opened their season yesterday with a victory over the Army Medical Center Nine. Joe Freschi's double in the seventh with the bases loaded was the big feature. Ray Knight and Freschi split the mound work for the Grays.

WONDERS CLAIM GAME.

The Wonder Boys Insects claim that the game between the Wonders and Burroughs nines Saturday should have been credited the Wonders, 3 to 2. They claim that a triple play was made in the first inning and the umpire permitted two Burfoughs players to remain on the bases. Both scored on a triple after the side should have been retired, Manager Poole, of the Wonders, contends.

Charge It!

Sergt. Silverberg, was the mess-sergeant of F. H., 165th, Forty-second division. The company was en route somewhere in France, when the truck on which the sergeant was riding stopped beside an orchard, and Silverberg ever-alert spied several trees laden with beautiful ripe plums.

Silverberg finally rounded up the owner of the orchard, vinyard or whatever it was, and after shaking hands, patting each other on the back &c, they entered into a long and extended conversation, principally consisting of bowing to each other, smiling at each other, pointing to the plum trees and throwing in a few "oui-oui's," just to let each other know that they understood perfectly.

Returning to the truck, Sergt. Silverberg secured a detail and in a few minutes the company was on its way, with several bushels of plums and giving three rousing cheers for France and its generous people.

Two months later we received a bill, just five times as large as it should have been accusing the company of having stolen the plums after the owner of the orchard had declined to sell anything. I am not positive whether this bill was ever paid or whether it is still charged to the organization.

Poor Mule Skinner

We had a mule in our outfit who possessed a temperament. After we got to Bourment one of the teamsters was ordered to take one of the wagons and proceed to Neuf Chateau for the company's supply of gas masks. The temperamental mule was selected to draw the wagon. Its guardian drove the thing as long as it would drive, then he led it for a similar period. When the two comrades were about to enter the town of Neuf Chateau the animal formed a conviction that it would try something new, and it sat down. The mule's guardain had never been noted for an excessive amount of good nature in so far as mules were concerned, and, after trying in vain to induce the four-footed pest to resume the journey, he proceeded to lay down a barrage of profanity which would have made any 'longshoreman green with envy. It was of no avail, for the mule had made up his mind that this was the best spot in France. This, of course, inspired the teamster to renewed efforts, and just as he felt that the force of his words must hurl the mule forward he looked up and saw a very pretty nurse looking at him in astonishment.

"I should think that such an animal would cause one to lose his temper, and I am surprised that you have not lost yours," she said. Then she walked away, leaving the profane one and the mule gazing at one another in perplexity.

Pass, Friend

We were camped in pup tents in a section near the Pontenezon Barracks, Brest, France. Our camp was surrounded by a hedge fence about 4 feet high, and a chain of sentries was continually patrolling its boundaries.

Having just landed, most all of us were not losing much time in getting acquainted with the French and their liquors. My bunkie, Pat D., of Washington, D. C., managed to have a pink nose whenever I saw him. About our third night in France, Pat and I slipped away from camp to visit a gin mill. We were granted no liberty while at this camp. On this night no moon or stars were shining, and it was so dark you could hardly see your hand in front of you. After having our fill of assorted liquors we started back to camp, maneuvering around to the rear of the camp, where there were several large clumps of hedge a few feet from the ones surrounding the camp. We hid in this hedge waiting until things were clear so we could jump the fence. I jumped first, and right into the waiting arms of the sergeant of the guard. The sergeant took me to the O. D., who sent me to my tent. About half an hour later the sergeant also brought Pat in. When the sergeant cleared out Pat brought out a quart bottle of cognac. I asked him where he got it as I knew he had none when we left the gin mill.

Here's his story: "I laid low after I heard the sergeant get you. A few minutes later I heard some one approaching. Thinking it was a sentry, and knowing I could not get away without being heard, I decided to try to bluff my way out. When the supposed sentry was a few feet from me, I shouted, Halt. Out of the darkness came a rather scared and timid voice saying, 'I've halted, sir.' I then said, 'advance to be recognized.' The boy came closer, and I again halted him. I then did not know what to say, so the first thing that came to my mind was, 'What have you got on your hip?' The scared voice replied, 'I haven't got it on my hip, sir, it's in may pants leg.'" Anyway Pat got the bottle, and as the sergeant did not search him, our party continued far into the night.

Don't Forget

Can you still remember
The story of seventy-six?
We were striving for liberty,
And were in an awful fix.

Can you see our great forefathers
Out on the battle field,
Fighting for our liberty
Our Nation to shield?

And now just to remind you
This strong and mighty Nation

When Germany, the aggressor,
Strived to rule the world;
How our doughboys landed over there
And the Stars and Stripes unfurled.

Landing on a foreign soil;
With courage never flinching,
The kaiser's dreams to foil.

If you had slept in muddy trenches,
With water to your knees;
Rats, cooties and bedbugs,
Yes, they even had some fleas.

Perhaps today when we need help
You would take a different stand;
And give the disabled veterans
A glad and helping hand.

Because the war is over
For some ten years or more,
Don't think that wars have ceased,
For there will be wars galore.

Our boys are ever ready
To heed the call to arms,
City chaps and farmer boys
Are awake to all alarms.

Those boys are always ready
Both to dare and do,
But, friends, when the war is over
The task is up to you.

Aviator Escapes in Crash Which Electrocutes Three

Plane Lands on Transmission Wires; Man Who Shot Chemical Stream at It and One Who Tried to Help Him Killed.

Ypsilanti, Mich., April 13 (A.P.).—Three men were electrocuted after a plane became entangled with high tension wires while attempting a landing at Ypsilanti Airport about 3:30 p. m. today.

The dead: Levi Keppler, 24, bank teller, of Ann Arbor; Harry Walters, 31, superintendent of the airport; William Clawson, 60, retired farmer of Ypsilanti.

Leon Hanselmann, 23, of Ann Arbor, owner of the plane and licensed pilot, was injured slightly.

According to witnesses, Hanselmann swung the plane too low approaching the field. It struck some high tension transmission wires, became entangled and remained suspended in the air. A wire came in contact with Keppler, killing him instantly. The plane burst into flames.

Walters ran to the plane carrying a fire extinguisher, witnesses said. As he turned on a stream of chemicals, electric current followed the liquid down and knocked him to the ground. Clawson tried to assist Walters and was killed instantly. Walters was taken to University Hospital at Ann Arbor, but was dead before the ambulance reached the hospital.

Hanselmann jumped from the plane, which continued to burn until employes of the Detroit Edison Co. cut the wires. An inquest was ordered.

ASSOCIATION BACKS BYARS RESOLUTION

Back-to-District Group of Arlington County Votes for Project.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Unanimous indorsement was given by the Back to the District Association at its meeting held in its headquarters in the Rucker Building at Clarendon Saturday night to a resolution by J. Cloyd Byars that the Congress of the United States be requested to institute proceedings whereby that portion of the District of Columbia, 10 miles square, over which Virginia has since 1846 exercised what is believed to be only de facto authority, shall be returned to the District of Columbia either by having the retrocession act declared unconstitutional in 1846, and voidable at the pleasurer of the Federal Government, or through negotiations with the State of Virginia.

It further sets forth that the State of Virginia be urged to cede back to the District of Columbia that portion conveyed to the State in 1789 at the behest of her illustrious son, as a patriotic gesture, a gracious and beautiful tribute to the memory, on or before the 200th anniversary of his birth.

Richard L. Eacho, vice president, announced the appointment of a special committee, composed of J. Cloyd Byars and Rollins D. Smith, to present the adopted resolution in person to Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas.

Announcement was made by Miss Bessie Christian, representing the Radnor Heights itizens Association, that the association has voted to unite with the Back-to-the-District Association.

Record time was made by County Officers William H. Thompson, C. Wayne Carr and John Conway in apprehending three men and stolen tires from the car of Maj. F. H. Golf, of Clarendon.

According to the police, a report was received from Maj Golf, who was at the Washington Golf and Country Club Saturday night at 12 o'clock, that tires had been stolen from his car.

At 2 o'clock a report was received from No. 7 Precinct that three men were being held. The officers, going to Washington, found three men giving their names as David Childs, of Cherrydale; William Hamilton, of Cherrydale, and Hamilton Brown, also of Cherrydale, together with the tires. The car was located a short distance from the country club in the rear of the tennis courts.

The trio will be given a hearing today before Police Judge Harry R. Thomas.

The Arlington County Medical Society will hold its monthly meeting tonight in the rooms of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce. Dr. S. T. Noland, president, will preside.

E. Lester Bennett, secretary of the Arlington County Civic Federation, announced yesterday that he is in receipt of a letter from Gov. John G. Pollard stating that he has not reached the question of the appointment of members on the special commission to study county government as provided by an act of the General Assembly, but that he will give consideration to the request made by the federation that an Arlington County man be appointed on the commission.

Mr. Bennett stated that in the letter sent to the governor it was pointed out that Arlington County is vitally interested in the question of the study of county government to be made by the commission and felt that a county man could well serve on the commission.

The Lyon Park Woman's Club will hold its monthly business meeting Wednesday night at the Community House at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Orr, president, asks that all members attend.

Other officers are: Mrs. Fred Jones, reelected first vice president; Mrs. O. B. Livingston, second vice president; Mrs J. H. Hill, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. R. Browning, recording secretary; Mrs. A. H. Barber, treasurer.

Mrs. J. S. Higgins was elected delegate to represent the club at the meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, which meets at Danville May 14.

The Arlington-Fairfax Volunteer Firemen's Association will hold its monthly meeting in the new firehouse of the Arlington Fire Department tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston will hold its monthly meeting in the school auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Announcement was made last night that the meeting of the Glebewood Citizens Association scheduled for tonight has been postponed until Monday night, April 21.

County Engineer C. L. Kinnier is announced as the speaker Wednesday afternoon over Station WJSV, Mount Vernon Hills, Va., under auspices of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Kinnier will discuss county roads and the progress made in their construction during the past year. The musical program will be furnished by the Northern Virginia Quartet.

Mrs. A. Chapman has been elected president of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Arlington Methodist Church. Other officers are: Mrs. Joseph Clark, first vice president; Mrs. Wallace, second vice president; Mrs. C. L. Dove, secretary, and Mrs. J. Hammond Brewer, treasurer.

The Ashton Heights Citizens Association announces that on Wednesday night, in the Woman's Clubhouse, it will hold its fourth and last of the series of card parties which have been sponsored by the association.

German Fascists Hit Young.

Berlin, April 13 (A.P.).—A party of unidentified Fascists today smeared the inscription "Death to Young" in red paint on three portals of the Reichstag Building, as part of their campaign of protest against Germany's acceptance of the Young reparations plan. Death Trial Goes Into Second Week

Dramatic Court Battle in Girl's Killing to Be Resumed Today.

Salem, Va., April 13 (A.P.).—The dramatic battle being waged in Roanoke County Circuit Court here to determine whether Buren Harman is guilty of the murder of his 18-year-old sweetheart, Freeda Bolt, will enter its second week tomorrow morning. At 10 o'clock attorneys for the 20-year-old defendant are expected to resume the introduction of evidence in his behalf.

Before the Commonwealth rested its case early Saturday, it succeeded in getting before the jury the fact that Harman told Deputy Sheriff Giles Harris, of Floyd County, where Freeda Bolt's body would be found. This evidence was permitted after Judge T. L. Keister had ruled an alleged confession made by the youth to Harris was not admissible as evidence.

Freeda Bolt's body was found in Roanoke County on December 18 last. At that time she had not been seen since leaving her boarding house, miles away, at Willis, in Floyd County, on December 12. No witness who saw her alive after she left Willis with a man whom her sister testified was Harman has been produced thus far. The case is not expected to reach the jury before Wednesday.

Richmond to View Motorcycle Test

Two-Day Competition Is Planned There for Next Month.

Richmond, Va., April 13 (A.P.).—A small army of motorcycle riders will guide their sputtering steeds into Richmond on May 3 for the beginning of a two-day rally of motorcycle enthusiasts, in which approximately 1,000 from Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and the District of Columgia are expected to participate.

Two State championship cups will be awarded by the Adventure Days committee for proficiency in motorcycle handling. C. W. Pinnell, chairman of the event, said 600 entries are assured and 1,000 are expected. A special competition ground is being laid out and officials of the American Motorcycle Association will be in attendance to supervise the hill-climbing event, which will develop the winner of the State hill climbing championship.

Another feature of the meet is the playing of motorcycle polo, in which four or five teams are expected to enter. Novelty races, trick riding, a broad jumping contest and similar events. All contests are limited to amateur riders.

Martinsburg Sees Hot Primary Fight

Heavy Ballot Is Expected in Nominations for City Posts.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 13—Indications today, on the eve of Martinsburg's municipal primaries, were that a heavy vote would be cast by both Democrats and the Republicans when they got to the polls tomorrow to nominate candidates for mayor and city council.

The contest between Mayor George W. Appleby, jr., and Councilman Chris H. Dailey for the Republican mayoralty nomination outshadowed that of all others, principally because Mr. Dailey represents a faction of the council which is fighting to oust not only Mayor Appleby but also City Attorney J. O. Henson, the entire police force and almost all city hall employes.

In the Democratic mayoralty primary the candidates are C. P. Howell, a business man, and W. C. Morton, former city superintendent of schools. The fight between them has been interesting, although lacking the bitterness of the Appleby-Dailey struggle. In every one of the five wards the Republicans have contests for the councilmanic nomination, while the Democrats are without contests in two wards.

Civil War Veteran Dies at Age of 87

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 13.—Charles R. Keyser, 87-year-old Union veteran, native of Shepherdstown, W. Va., died here today at Memorial Hospital. Mr. Keyser's death leaves but eleven members in Tyler Post, No. 5, Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Keyser went from Jefferson County, then in Virginia, in 1861 to enlist in the Union Army when he was 18. His father, Charles A. Keyser, and his brother, John Keyser, fought for the Confederacy. Both brothers once met under the parental roof at Shepherdstown, each wearing the uniform of his cause. Mr. Keyser served throughout the war, and was once taken prisoner and exchanged. He was in Ford's Theater, Washington, when President Lincoln was shot and he remembered seeing Booth, the assassin, run across the stage.

Mr. Keyser was an expert cabinet maker, and maintained his furniture store and cabinet shop here without interruption since 1868 until stricken by illness a month ago. He resided with his only daughter, Mrs. Cora Wilson. He is also survived by two sons, former City Commissioner C. Frank Keyser and Albert E. Keyser. Mr. Keyser was a senior elder in the First Christian Church.

SUMMER INN SAVED FROM FOREST FIRES

OTHER AREAS IN PERIL

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., April 13.—Almost superhuman efforts of 100 volunteers battling fire all night saved the summer hotel at Rock Enon Springs, at the eastern base of Great North Mountain west of here, from being engulfed by forest fires today. The property is owned by Fred L. Glaize, Winchester. Volunteers directed by national forest and game superyisors sawed trees and cut underbrush between the fire and hotel and removed it just in time to avoid a conflagration.

During the day the fire on the east side of the mountain was brought under control, only to break out anew in the late afternoon. It also continued to spread on the other side in the direction of Capon Springs, W. Va., another historic summer resort, and forest and game wardens stationed in West Virginia had gathered volunteers to manage backfires.

The area already burned covers a ten-mile stretch. Immense quantities of hard and soft wood timber have been destroyed, large green trees burning like tinder, so furious were the flames.

Heavy Losses in Timber.

Underbrush was unusually dry, due to a protracted drought. Heaviest timber losers thus far are Fred L. Glaize and Godfrey and William C. Miller, Winchester. Word early tonight was that flames were encroaching on immense tracts of the Maryland Mining & Lumber Co., of which J. Natwick, of Baltimore, is president. They have about 25,000 acres on the stump. Walter R. Talbot, Winchester, was advised his timber holdings were likewise menaced. A schoolhouse on the Virginia side was destroyed.

Winchester & Western Railroad Co. officials called on employes generally to fight fires away from trestles and trackage through wooded strips. The fires have driven great numbers of numerous species of wild animal life from their haunts. Sparks from a locomotive were said to have started the fires.

Hoover Camp Not Endangered.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 13.—All forest fires in the Shenandoah Valley area, raging over 15,000 acres of woodland, were believed under control tonight as a result of the heroic efforts of hundreds of fire fighters and to the dying down of the brisk wind which prevailed yesterday. Federal and State forestry officials reported here tonight.

Fire Warden Wilbur H. Miller, of Stanley, Page County, reported that the blaze, which raged yesterday in Madison on the Rapidan, was conquered last night after burning over 300 acres of scrub timber land. He said that neither the Hoover camp nor the Skyland Resort were endangered. The fire, on Old Rag and Nigger Mountains, was fully 3 miles from the Hoover camp and was conquered by 65 State fire fighters.

The big blaze in Fridleys Gap, near Harrisonburg, in the Massanutten Mountain area of the Shenandoah National Forest, was believed under control tonight. The blaze was confined to Gap area after raging over 5,000 acres of Government timber, much of which was valuable.

Additional Men Available.

Supervisor McNair, of the Shenandoah National Forest, returned here late today from Capon Springs, W. Va., reporting that Natural Bridge National Forestry officials and notified him that their 2,000-acre blaze on McCalls Creek was under control and that fire fighters could be rushed here if needed.

With no wind prevailing, fire fighters believe they will have all the blazes well in hand by tomorrow. Tonight they were attempting to hold the blazes in check and "mopping up" in front of the fire to prevent its spread.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 13.—Attorney E. L. Luttrell, of Martinsburg, senior counsel for Jake Devilbliss, of Crucible, Pa., who was convicted of the murder of a fellow-workman and companion, Theodore Wreckman, after a trial in Circuit Court at Berkeley Springs, near here, a few days ago, will present a formal motion for a retrial of the case when Judge D. H. Rodgers reopens court in the Morgan County town tomorrow morning.

The jury in Devilbliss' case returned a verdict of fire degree murder with a recommendation, which carries with it life imprisonment. Wreckman was murdered about four weeks ago near Great Cacapon, W. Va., and Devilbliss was arrested two days later and charged with the crime.

JEFFERSON LAUDED IN MONTICELLO FETE

Senators Fess and Dill Pay Tribute to Champion of Religious Freedom.

HOOVER SENDS WREATH

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 13.—The active part taken by Jefferson in making the right of free worship an inviolable one in the United States was treated at length by Senators Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, and Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, principal speakers at the exercises held at Monticello this afternoon, on the 187th anniversary of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

Following exercises at the mansion, there was a procession down the hillside to Jefferson's grave, in the family burying ground, where about fifteen wreaths were placed at the base of the monument of the Sage of Monticello.

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergy joined in the ceremony of homage at the tomb. The speakers were Bishop Collins Denny, of the Southern Methodist Church; the Rev. John A. Kelliher, rector of St. Peter's Church, Richmond, and Rabbi Edward N. Calisch, of Richmond.

President Sends Wreath.

Among the wreaths was one from President Hoover, a simple design of magnolia leaves and palms. It was placed upon the statue by Senator Fess. Flowers were also dropped from an airplane.

Other wreaths were contributed by Gov. John Pollard and placed by Mrs. E. D. Hotchkiss, of Richmond; by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; the board of governors of the Jefferson Memorial Foundations; the National educational committee of the Jefferson Memorial Foundation; the Virginians Society of New York; the National Democratic Club; the Jeffersonian Society of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; the Americans of Greek Descent, the editor of Atlantis; the Virginia D. A. R., through Mrs. J. Cooke Grayson; the Williams Chapter, U. D. C., Washington, placed by Miss Anita Schade; the Robert E. Lee Chapter U. D. C., Washington, through Mrs. Claude M. Bennett; the Ladies Hermitage Association made of leaves freedom of loving people on earth than he does today," said Senator Fess. "It would be difficult for us to overestimate the supreme importance of Jefferson's accomplishments and the liberties of a great people. They are but the fulfillment of the from the tomb of Andrew Jackson, the National Society of Colonial Dames, of Missouri, and the University of Virginia, placed by Dean John Lloyd Newcomb.

Stuart G. Gibboney, president of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, was in charge of the Monticello exercises, held on the south portico of the mansion. Close to one thousand persons heard the speakers. Music was furnished by the Municipal Band, of Charlottesville, and the Bright Colonial uniforms of the Monticello guard, the local National Guard unit, lent color to the scene.

Senators Laud Jefferson.

"Jefferson never meant more to the ambition and the determination of the original settlers here in America who came to its shores for political freedom and the opportunity to worship God in accordance with their conscience."

"A new declaration of independence, written today under the inspiration of Jefferson's principles," said Senator Dill, "should not be a repudiation of monarchy, but a vote against the rule of money. It should be an overturning of monopolies and mergers whereby a few individuals exploit millions of people by profiteering practices that defy the Government. It should be a clarion call to a revolution with ballots to prevent our becoming a Nation of employes under an oligarchy of money kings."

Several old men, such as the "Big Butter and Egg Man," played by Bill May; the widower, Mr. Collins, played by Frank Steele, and the old bachelor professor, which part has not yet been assigned, fall in love with Aunt Lucia and propose to her, or him, creating mirth-provoking scenes.

The Children's Home and Day Nursery is the special protege of the Rotary Club, which is assisted in the work of maintaining the nursery by practically every civic and patriotic organization of the city. From an experiment on a small scale, it has grown to a very useful and important institution.

Home of Monroe Visited by Throng

Those Attending Jefferson Day Festivities Also See Ash Lawn.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 13.—Hundreds of pilgrims, here today to attend the Jefferson birthday exercises at Monticello, got their first glimpse of "Ash Lawn," historic home of James Monroe, fifth President of the United States, purchased in February by Jay W. Johns, coal operator, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and converted into a public shrine.

The occasion was a buffet luncheon given at noon by Mr. and Mrs. Johns in honor of three generations of Monroe descendants. Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, of Washington; Mrs. William Crawford Johnson, of Frederick, Md.; Miss Maud Gouverneur, Mrs. Green Clay Goodloe, Green Clay Goodloe, jr., and Lawrence G. Hoes, of Washington; Mrs. W. W. McIntire, Mrs. John W. Stark and the Misses Anne Monroe and Jean Monroe Stark, of Baltimore.

Five hundred today visited the landmark where the author of the Monroe Doctrine spent 26 years of his eventful life and expressed deepest sorrow at having first to leave it, and then to part with it when destiny called him to the White House and to represent his country in important posts abroad.

Mr. Smith estimates his loss at $4,000, partly covered by insurance.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

PALACE

"LUMMOX." United Artists picturization of the novel by Fannie Hurst, starring Winifred Westover, supported by Ben Lyon, William Collier, jr., Edna Murphy and stellar cast, under the direction of Herbert Brenon. Reviewed Saturday night.

By NELSON B. BELL

To those thoughtful picture-goers who do not object, especailly during Holy Week, to an undercurrent of religious suggestion in their entertainment, this respectful and sincere adaptation of one of Fannie Hurst's most widely-read fictions will come as one of the audible cinema's major accomplishments.

Although paced to perhaps too deliberate a tempo throughout its length, Herbert Brenon, the director, has managed to imbue his production with something of the substantial impressiveness that characterized Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House," Jerome K. Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and Booth Tarkington's "Mister Antonio." Or if you would prefer the same element of appeal in a work of nondramatized fiction, it may be found in Dr. Vivian in Henry Sydnor Harrison's novel of "V. V.'s Eyes."

In "Lummox" the feminine counterpart of the male characters enacted in the plays on the stage by Walter Hampden, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Otis Skinner has been intrusted to Winifred Westover, who, by this single performance, takes her place, after an absence of some seven years, among the most profoundly sympathetic actresses of the talking screen.

It is Miss Westover's intricately involved task to make real and believable the character and the life story of a servant girl who during a quarter century of drudgery never rose above the low estate of slavey, although in her smothered and inarticulate nature were embodied those Christ-like qualities of love, compassion and forgiveness that inspired poets to write their masterpieces and musicians their most commanding works. The mother of a child she was forced to give up to strangers at birth, Bertha Oberg, from the fringes of a life in which she could never participate, followed him through the years of his babyhood, youth and adolescence to reap her reward finally by occupying a crowded place among the standees at the concert in which he demonstrated himself a master pianist.

Along this forlorn path, Bertha's passage was marked by deeds of kindness to the weak, the weary and the oppressed—a youthful scrubwoman, an associate of her early days, she later rescues from a brothel; an aged Jewish mother she attends in death, rather that let her know her son's affection has been alienated by his wife; the house of "Silly Willy," the menial nitwit, she puts in order; a widowed baker, with five small children, she lends a helpful hand, and so on through a long list of benefactions. A figure of infinite pathos and of infinite power.

For the convincing impersonation of this drab but disarming role, Winifred Westover, the former Mrs. William S. Hart, returns to the screen with a seemingly complete equipment—appearance, voice, dialect and an intangible aura of genuineness all attend her work and lend it authenticity. Among the long list of supporting players, Dorothy Janis, Ben Lyon, William Collier, jr., Edna Murphy, Clara Langsner, as Mrs. Walenstein, sr., and William Bakewell, as the grown son, make the deepest imprint on memory.

The Loew stage revue, which comprised the only other item on the bill at the performance I attended, runs to the opposite extreme by confining itself wholly to flippancy, tunefulness and dancing. Herman Timberg and brother Sammy are the mainsprings of the fun, music and hoofing, ably assisted by Barbara Blair, with a comedy line exclusively her own, Leo Chalzel and the Chester Hale Girls. As well as this town knows the Timbergs, that ought to be enough!

COLUMBIA

"MEN ARE THAT WAY." Paramount's film version of George Kelly's comedy drama, "The Show Off," adapted for the screen by Herman Mankiewicz; featuring Hal Skell and Doris Hill. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Reviewed Saturday night by W. A. Whitney.

Another stage play has gone the way of many others and now appears upon the talking screen after having previously been done for the silent. George Kelly's farce, "The Show Off," is the latest addition to the list and one of the best done adaptations of a stage play to date. An excruciatingly funny comedy to begin with, acted by a cast finely ensconced in the method of farcial presentation, and augmented by direction which recognizes the possibilities of camera mobility to assist in rapidity of action—all these and more, combine to make a fast-moving, hilarious and well done comedy, which at times takes on a serious note bordering on the tragic.

As might easily be supposed from a picture based on a play with such a title, the show-off is the whole show, and Hal Skelly proves capable of making him that very thing. His is the principal role and as "the kid from West Philly," whose bump of superself-esteem results all but disastrously for all concerned, he gets everything out of the part that is in it.

Chief in the supporting cast is Clara Blandlick, who gives a splendid characterization of the harassed mother. Charles Sellon is fine as the equally harassed dad. Morgan Farley, Helene Chadwick, William B. Davidson, Eugene Pallette, Gordon DeMain and E. H. Calvert complete the cast.

The current version of the former stage success is well mounted and directed by Frank Tuttle, who has taken his action where it occurs, instead of waiting until the actors get on the set to talk about it.

In "Blotto," Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, supported by Anita Garvin, deliver one of their funniest pieces, which, while billed as an all-talkie, is done almost entirely in pantomime. The Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Splashing Thru," deals with swimming and swimmers and contains some excellent underwater photography. A release of the Hearst Metrotone News completes the screen subjects.

For an overture, the Columbia Orchestra, under the direction of Claude Burrows, plays selections from "Putting on the Ritz."

FOX

"THE BIG PARTY." Fox Movietone melodrama, with story and dialogue by Harlan Thompson, featuring Dixie Lee, Sue Carol, Frank Albertson, Richard Keene, Walter Catlett and Charles Judels. Directed by John Blystone. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

They are tossing a big party at the Fox this week, no foolin'. It may be the time of the year when a young man's fancy and an old one is hopeful, or any number of things, but it seemed to me yesterday afternoon that for wholly irresponsible whoopee and a lot of fun that didn't mean a thing a minute after it had happened, this bill comes dangerously near being what the doctor ordered in place of the phospho-lecithin.

It's a shopgirl and working boy story, with a dash of millionaire on the side and a rousing scrap at the finish to bring the gal to her senses—nothing that hasn't been done a thousand times before, but still a frolic that is executed so entirely in the spirit of youth and with such a barrage of crisp chatter and so much devastating pulchritude and so many zippy songs that the whole business gathers a tremendous momentum and lands the customer right out in the aisle. Or so, as I have said, it seemed to me.

The girls involved in this saga of the five-and-dimes and the ateliers of the mauve males masquerading as "Mme. Louise" are Dixie Lee, who has never before within my ken had a comparable opportunity to demonstrate how self-reliant an artiste she is in dialogue, song and dance; Sue Carol, whose ebullience are strangely suppressed, and Dorothy Brown, a gold-digger who fills smart evening gowns with eclat, aplomb and many other things! The boys are Frank Albertson, Richard Keene and Jack Smith, "the whispering barytone." But these are not the only troublemakers. Walter Catlett and Charles Judels, as Goldfarb and DuPuy, "Mme. Louise"; Ilka Chase and Elizabeth Patterson, as their wives, and Douglas Gilmore, as the millionaire who didn't play pretty, add hilariously to the goings-on, each in his individual fashion. The combined effect is highly destructive to any idea of dignified somnolence.

The songs scattered about among the proceedings are "Bluer Than Blue Over You" and "Good for Nothing But Love," sung by Miss Lee; "I'm Climbing Up a Rainbow," whispered by Jack Smith, and "Nobody Knows But Rosie," sung by Richard Keene. There are party tunes, saxophone tooting and ukelele twanging in addition.

The stage is no less productive of superlative diversion of the lighter sort. Fanchon and Marco's "Types" are about the sort that a majority will applaud. There is no continuity to the revue, but splendid individual specialties are introduced by Harry Howard, a rough and ready comedian—accent on the rough—assisted by a midget and a lazy dog; the Trado Twins, singers, dancers, comedians and masters of ceremonies; Carlena Diamond, a gorgeous Titian harpist, who is a virtuoso on her instrument and a stimulant in her dance, and Harold Stanton, tenor, who sings the "Vesti la Giubba" aria from "Il Pagliacci," by Leoncavallo, better than it has been sung in these parts for many, many months. The line girls also add appreciably to the vivacity of the occasion.

Alexander Callam, again relieved of the duties of m. c., sang "The Palms" in fine voice with full orchestral accompaniment, and the symphony, under Leon Brusiloff's baton, played another medley of popular tunes, called "Hits of the Moment," as its overture.

The Fox Movietone News is the added starter, but finishes in the money.

METROPOLITAN

"THE FURIES." First National-Vitaphone production, adapted from the play by Zoe Akins. Cast headed by Lois Wilson and H. B. Warner. Directed by Alan Crosland. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

Now comes along an odd sort of thing for the talkie gods to be fathering, and one is disposed to give it every chance in the world before setting it down as impossible, simply because it seems to represent a firm attempt to swerve aside from the beaten track and because two of the finest screen players have given it their sincere and devoted efforts. There has always been a cry from the heights that movie plots were too obvious. Here is one that tries hard not to be, but it is no more likely to satisfy the superior critic than it does those of us who are average fans of the films.

The trouble seems to lie in an unwise attempt to inject serious and subtle psychological interest into the framework of an ordinary murder mystery. Detective stories are, by rights, clever puzzles, treating crime lightly so as to tease and amuse the mind without undue upheaval. Disturbances of the soul that lead to murder are another matter. Miss Akins' play has not been seen in Washington, and whether she there succeeded with her strange mixture of potions is unknown in this quarter. Certainly the screen adapters have failed.

Lois Wilson is seen as the unhappy wife of a man of wealth who has given her ample right to freedom, which she longs for but has been unable to attain. She is attended by an old admirer whom she would like to marry. The path to divorce appears to be barred by the husband's attorney, an intense, saturnine sort of character, played by H. B. Warner. The husband is shot dead. The wife and lover are both suspected and suspect each other. In the course of the investigation the lover's weak traits are disclosed and he is dismissed by the lady. The attorney's hand is now revealed as guiding the whole affair, and most of the later footage is given over to analysis of his "hunchbacked soul," driven through the years by a deep infatuation for his client's wife. In short, he is crazy, and in the end escapes from his unbearable self by a leap from his skyscraper window.

It is all rather dim and artificial, and the musical motive, from Gluck's opera, signifying the hounding of fate, does not tend to relieve the obscurity. Aside from the work of the two principals the acting is stagy, but this must be ascribed in part to the stilted lines and unreal situations. There is some attempt at incidental humor, but it would have been better to start out with a sense of humor and cling fast to it all the way.

Two short Vitaphone "varieties" are "The Sultan's Jester," in color, and a comedy about a drunken reporter who either is or is trying to be Charlie Ruggles. Graham McNamee tells about the news pictures.

EARLE

"STRICTLY MODERN." First National production, starring Dorothy Mackaill, supported by Sidney Blackmer, Julanne Johnston and Warner Richmond. Directed by William A. Seiter. Reviewed Saturday afternoon.

A scrambled love story in which the contrasting feminine figures are a bride-to-be and a brilliant young novelist, specializing in unconventional tales of ultrasophistication, has here been made into an inconsequential, but agreeably breezy, comedy under the skilful direction of William A. Seiter. Its title is predicated upon the sprightly viewpoint of the character impersonated by Dorothy Mackaill, but might quite as well have been "Hopelessly Old-Fashioned," had Julanne Johnston been the star instead of Miss Mackaill. What I mean to say is that the picture is as old-fashioned as it is modern. Otherwise, in this particular instance, there would have been no plot.

The intended groom of the young woman who actually is in love with a bombastic member of the local judiciary, blows up with a loud bang two days before the wedding, socks the judge in the eye and runs out on the whole distasteful business.
